Tigers Secretary, Pilot's Wife Visit "Mickey"

New York, May 27 (AP)—An official bulletin said today that Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, who was struck on the head by a pitched ball Tuesday, had passed "a good night" and that his condition "had improved."

The bulletin was signed by Dr. E. Emmett Walsh, Yankee physician, and issued at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Dr. Byron Stookey, brain specialist, said:

"The outlook is fine."

Both physicians agreed Cochrane slept well.

Mrs. Cochrane spent the night at the hospital.

Though visibly nervous as she talked, Mrs. Cochrane said she now was confident of her husband's complete recovery.

Ann Marsters IN Hollywood

A NEW SERIES

Probably one of the best things Ann Marsters did in her new Hollywood series was to look up Bill Fields and make sure that he'll be back on your screens—and that pretty soon. In another of her interesting new stories she describes her visit to the home of W. C.—the man who laughs at his own golf, at his own pool and the man who even made Florenz Ziegfeld laugh. Miss Marsters' new series appears daily in the Boston Evening American and also in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

AUTO KILLS 2 ROXBURY MOTHERS

Two women pedestrians were killed and a third was seriously injured early today when they were struck by an automobile at the intersection of Elm Hill avenue and Seaver street in Dorchester.

Mrs. Rose Rosenberg, 60, of Maple street, Roxbury, mother of five children, was thrown into the air by the impact.

Bennett Silverblatt, Pine street, Lowell, alleged operator of the auto, told police that he was proceeding at a rate of 25 miles an hour.

Mrs. Rebecca Rosenberg, sister-in-law of Mrs. Rosenberg, 50, and mother of six, living in Hartwell street, Roxbury, was dragged 10 feet by the machine before it passed over her body.

DIE WITHIN HOUR

Rushed to the Boston City Hospital by police ambulances both women died within an hour of the accident.

Mrs. Jennie Litzenstein, 48, of 19 Wayne street, was walking on the outside of the other two women as they stepped off the curbing and was crushed from the blow.

AT MOTHERS' CLUB

The three women were walking to their home from a meeting of the Roxbury Mothers' Club, when the accident occurred.

It was the third time within the last five years that Mrs. Rebecca Rosenberg had been hit by an automobile and two years ago she was struck down at the same spot that she met with the fatal accident today.

In Roxbury court today before Judge Joseph F. Palmer police sought to obtain a warrant charging Silverblatt with two counts of manslaughter and one count of operating so as to endanger. Judge Palmer, however, continued the hearing to June 3 because of the failure of several witnesses to appear.

George Baker Stricken on Pacific Cruise

The operation was performed aboard Baker's steam yacht, The Viking, now sailing the Pacific. Apparently a physician was hailed from a passing liner.

Jackson Reynolds, former president of the First National Bank, announced:

"Mr. George F. Baker, cruising in the South Pacific has undergone an operation aboard his yacht, The Viking, for peritonitis. "He came through the operation in good condition and is expected in Honolulu on Saturday."

The first indication of trouble aboard the yacht was disclosed in a cable from Wellington, New Zealand.

It said the liner Niagara, en route from Auckland to Vancouver, was delayed two and a half hours while a ship's surgeon and a nurse boarded the American yacht Viking to perform an abdominal operation on a member of the yacht's company.

Freight Car Rolls Into Harbor, Men Jump for Lives

Stevedores ran for their lives, one of them leaping to safety into the harbor today, when a freight car rolled from a barge and partly submerged beside the United Fruit steamer San Bruno, tied up at Long wharf.

John Arean of Billerica street, North End, jumped into the water and swam to a nearby pier to escape the loose freight car.

The car was one of four on a barge which had been tied up to the San Bruno for transfer of a cargo of bananas.

A check which loosened sent the heavy car on its plunge but underneath truck prevented it from falling free of its barge.

Engineers surveyed the damage and made plans to haul the car back on the barge.

Roosevelt Better; To Visit Mother

Washington, May 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt began seeing callers again today, but remained in the living quarters of the White House to rid himself of the last traces of a head cold.

ELDER'S BAIL $10,000; SAYS 'NOT GUILTY'

By JAMES F. DOOLING

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Greenfield, May 27—Thomas E. Elder, retired dean of Mount Hermon School for Boys, calmly pleaded not guilty in district court today on charges of assault with intent to murder while armed with a dangerous weapon and was held in bail of $10,000 for a June 3 hearing.

Authorities charge that the white-haired educator threatened S. Allen Norton, former cashier at Mount Hermon, Tuesday night as Norton stepped from his garage.

Unable to arrange bail immediately, Elder, who turned to poultry raising at Allen Bay, N. H., after his retirement, was led back to a cell in Franklin County jail while his attorney, Charles Fairburst, made attempts to raise the money.

Wearing a gray suit that was rumpled, bearing indications of the night he had spent in a cell, Elder was led into the courtroom and placed in the prisoners' dock.

He carried the same smile that he wore two years ago when he entered the same court house as principal witness for the secret in-

'CONCOCTED' BY LAWYERS, HE CHARGES

The hearing before the legislative committee investigating the affairs of the defunct Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company was part of a plot "concocted" by former Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman and a New York attorney, Insurance Commissioner Francis J. De Celles charged as he testified at the State House today.

This development in the hearing came as the insurance commissioner resumed the witness stand for the third consecutive day.

Leading up to the charges made by DeCelles was a series of questions by Senator Edmund S. Oppenheimer of Springfield, chairman of the committee.

The senator sought to ascertain why DeCelles failed to testify during his first appearance before the committee as to the alliances which he claimed existed between Count Luigi Castell, a director; Maurice D. Adams, treasurer; Ray E. Latshaw, general manager, and Frank Cohen, chief financial backer of the defunct company.

BAD WRONG IMPRESSION

"I was giving testimony under the erroneous impression that we were investigating the Commonwealth Mutual; DeCelles replied. "That's exactly what we are

ELDER SAYS 'NOT GUILTY,' COURT SETS BAIL AT $10,000

EDUCATOR HELD IN JAIL ON SHOTGUN CHARGES

The tiny country courtroom was filled with spectators long before the former school head quietly took his seat in the prisoners' cage.

Following the innocence plea, Assistant District Attorney Henry Herr asked that bail be set at $15,000 because of the "seriousness" of the alleged crime.

SEEKS LOWER BAIL

Protesting immediately Attorney Fairhurst declared the amount "exorbitant" and requested bail of about $3000.

He also looked for a speedy hearing and objected to the two-week continuance requested by the prosecution. He argued that his client should not be held in jail for such a period and Judge Ball then set June 3 for hearing.

The accused ex-dean sat silently while the court first disposed of an accident case. Beside him sat another prisoner who was charged with intoxication.

After short deliberation, Judge Philip Ball decided on $10,000 and Elder was taken back to Greenfield police station while his attorney sought to arrange bail.

CALLS CHARGE FANTASTIC

Although worn physically from a day and night in police hands, Dr. Elder was undismayed at Greenfield county jail and predicted this afternoon that everything would be cleared up after the hearing.

"It is utterly fantastic," he told newspapermen.

"It is a case of mistaken identity and I am sure the word of my wife will outweigh that of those who accuse me."

Elder smiled as he talked and said that he had read newspapers which jail authorities provided.

RECONSTRUCTS SCENE

It was on Attorney Fairhurst's advice that Elder waived extradition and came voluntarily back to Greenfield with state police after his arrest at his Alton Bay home.

The arrest was on a Greenfield warrant based on a story told police by Norton.

Norton said he was accosted outside his home by a man who allegedly threatened him with a shotgun. He charges Elder was the man.

According to Norton, he came out of his garage, after putting away his auto, and was met by the intruder.

"I want to talk to you," Norton told police the man shouted.

Then the man pulled the shotgun from beneath his coat and brandished it menacingly, Norton said.

FLEES INTO HOUSE

Frightened, Norton ducked around a corner of the garage and escaped into his house, he told police.

He said a full moon was shining and he was able to recognize his assailant.

Norton's account of the so-called shotgun incident was substantiated, in general, by Miss Yvonne Arsenault, employed in a home next to that of the Nortons.

She said she looked out a window and saw a man with a "long gun" standing near the Norton garage.

She was sure, she said, that the weapon the man was brandishing was not a revolver or a pistol.

The man wore an overcoat, she said. She did not recognize him.

As fellow officers of the Mt. Hermon school, Elder and Norton were closely associated for years.

Both retired after the school figured in one of New England's most mysterious murder cases, the shotgun slaying of Dr. Elliot Speer, the institution's 55-year-old headmaster.

Elder and Norton were among the witnesses who testified at the inquest.

SEARCH STARTED

When the Speer murder investigation had run its futile course, the former Dean Elder moved to New Hampshire where he lived quietly, devoting himself to poultry raising and to his activities as a member of a national association of thoroughbred cattle owners.

Norton, also retired, remained at his home here.

Elder denied having been in Greenfield recently or anywhere in Massachusetts, for that matter.

He said he had been in Brattleboro, Vt., and in Keene, N. H., and had been in a Keene hotel with his wife at the time Norton claimed to have been accosted in Greenfield, more than 40 miles away.

STORY CORROBORATED

O'Neill said Mr. and Mrs. Elder registered at the hotel between 6.00 and 7.00 o'clock Tuesday night, retiring about an hour later.

Elder told newspapermen that he and his wife arose at 7 yesterday morning, starting back to Alton immediately after breakfast.

Notified that Elder had returned to his home and had been held by New Hampshire authorities, Massachusetts State Detectives Maurice Nelligan, Joseph L. Ferrari and John J. Canavan hurried to Alton Bay by automobile.

Elder was taken at once to state police barracks at Holden, where Captain John F. Stokes, head of the state detective bureau, was waiting to question him.

The interrogation continued for five consecutive hours.

At its conclusion, early today, Elder was brought to the Greenfield police station, where he was booked, fingerprinted, photographed and placed in a cell.

The formal charge entered against him was assault with intent to murder while in possession of a dangerous weapon."

Elder gave his age as 57. This came as a surprise to police, who had understood from his former associates that he was in his late 60's.

Newspapermen who saw Elder last at the time of the Speer murder investigation said today his appearance bore out his story of having suffered from ill health and disability caused by a heart malady.

FACE HAGGARD

He limped noticeably as he walked from the state police barracks to the auto which awaited him. His gray hair was thin and his face wan and haggard.

He wore a gray summer suit and a blue shirt, with a maroon tie. His clothing was disarranged by his long and tiresome trip from New Hampshire.

At the Greenfield police station, the lieutenant in charge gave Elder his "best cell," a none-too-luxurious cubicle six feet by four feet.

Elder made no complaint at the lock-up's limited accommodations, but fell asleep within 15 minutes, the lieutenant said.

"We're going to fight this thing from the start," said Attorney Fairhurst.

"He wasn't in Greenfield nor within 40 miles of Greenfield at the time of this alleged shotgun assault.

"He doesn't blame Norton for the mistake. It was just a case of a wrong identification.

"But Dean Elder has nothing to conceal. We want all the cards on the table.

"The sooner the police produce what evidence they think they have, the sooner my client will be exonerated and freed."

Girl Says She Saw Gun in Threat Case

Yvone Arsenault of Greenfield, who told police she saw intruder with "long"-gun menace S. Allen Norton as he stood in his garage. Miss Arsenault is employed in a home adjoining the Norton home, and said she looked out of window when she heard voices in the garage, and witnessed the man, wearing an overcoat, pointing gun into garage, and later saw him run to sedan and speed away.

Lindy Babe's Birth Still Unrecorded

London, May 27 (AP)—British officials were disclosed today to have suspended the ordinary routine of notification of birth as required by law in the case of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh's third son.

A. J. Read, registrar of births for the Borough of St. Marylebone, disclosed the legal requirements had been relaxed at the request of the famous flier.

"By Lindbergh's express wish to secure privacy," Read said, "the birth was not included in the weekly list of notifications sent me by the medical officer of health, Dr. Charles Porter. The birth has not been registered although I believe it occurred on May 13."

Read said the birth might be entered on some future list as a matter of record.

Traffic "Cop"

Directing traffic in his shirt-sleeves at the intersection of Beacon and Park streets was a man who told police he didn't know his own name.

The only car that stopped on his signals was a police prowl car, which transferred the would-be traffic officer to the Milk street station, and subsequently to the Psychopathic Hospital.

"I gave my coat to a starving man," he told officers.

He was described as 5 feet 11 inches tall, weight about 160 pounds, dressed in blue vest and trousers.

"Who Am I?"

Rushing into the Fields Corner police station, a young man asked officers:

"Who am I? Who are my folks? Where do I live?"

The young man, between 23 and 24 years old, said that he had been wandering around for a "long time."

He last remembers playing baseball with a high school team somewhere, and also remembers working as a cook in a summer camp once, he told police.

He was taken to Boston City Hospital, to be treated for exposure, hunger, and be psychoanalyzed. Police said he was wearing gray trousers, brown shoes and a brown leather zipper jacket.

The ministry now controls all radio broadcasts in Italy, the press, including weekly and monthly periodicals, and exerts an influence on book publishers, writers and lecturers.

Thousands Walk Over Golden Gate

San Francisco, May 27 (AP)—Pedestrians walked across San Francisco's famed Golden Gate today for the first time as the world's largest suspension bridge opened to the public.

The $35,000,000 span of concrete and steel joins San Francisco with Marin County and has an overchannel span of 4200 feet.

Toll station officials estimated 3000 to 4000 persons jammed the San Francisco approach of the bridge when the blast of a huge fog horn in the middle of the span signaled the opening to pedestrians at 6 a. m.

Nearly 200 state and city police patrolled the bridge to guard against attempted suicides. Six fire trucks and as many ambulances were stationed at the span.

The bridge will be opened to motor traffic tomorrow.

FRIENDS DECRY 'PERSECUTION'

(Copyright, 1937, by International News Service)

Monts, France, May 27—Friends of the Duke of Windsor decried his "persecution" by the British government today.

And the Duke himself, although he remained silent, was revealed as stunned and hurt by action of the government in banning attendance of court or government officials at his marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield June 3.

The little party at the Chateau de Candé, where the Duke, Mrs. Warfield and other guests are passing the time until the wedding day, was dazed when they learned only "unofficial guests" from Britain would be permitted to attend the wedding ceremony.

But the Duke's friends rallied to his support, pointing out the government's decision would prevent even associates of many years' standing from attending the Duke's wedding.

One friend of the duke told International News Service:

"I can't believe the government would prevent such a person as 'Mouse' Fielden, who was the duke's pilot for many years, and for whom the duke, while King, created the post of captain of the King's flight, from attending the wedding."

OTHERS BANNED

This friend declared the governments ban had prevented attendance of the duke's former equerries, Sir Piers Legh, Captain W. D. C. Greenacre and Major Ulick Alexander; Sir Godfrey Thomas, for many years his private secretary, and Lord Brownlow, the duke's former lord in waiting, who escorted Mrs. Simpson from England to Cannes at the time of the abdication crisis.

Another who was barred was Sir Walford Selby, British minister to Vienna, although his wife will be present.

Meanwhile, the duke's superiors are glorying in the "spunk" shown by Hugh Lloyd Thomas, former equerry and now first secretary of the British embassy in Paris, and Sir Walter T. Monckton, attorney-general of the Duchy of Cornwall, the only British officials braving the British government's displeasure by their determination to attend the wedding.

AWAIT REACTION

There is much speculation whether their presence will result in any official repercussions. How many other officials have been prevented from coming is not known, since the exact number invited to the wedding has not been divulged.

It was learned the duke has verbally invited Randolph Churchill, son of the former chancellor of the exchequer, to attend.

Thomas is believed to be risking a bright career in accepting the invitation. An authoritative source said he is defying the government's wishes because of his loyalty and great friendship for the Duke of Windsor.

Church of England Blamed for Guest Ban

London, May 27 (AP)—The powerful Beaverbrook press sharply criticized the Church of England today for what it termed a too harsh fratment of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

Rallying to the defense of Britain's abdicated monarch, the Daily Express flatly blamed leaders of the church for inspiring virtual governmental ostracism of his wedding to the woman for whom he gave up his throne.

The published list of those invited to attend the ceremony June 3 at the Chateau de Candé was considered remarkable for its many omissions—reportedly under government pressure—and the Express summed up a full column editorial with the question:

"Isn't it possible the duke is being treated with rather too much of a rough edge"

The paper claimed that as the duke's wedding day approached "a series of penalties and prohibitions are laid against him and against those who desire to show him friendship and affection."

Referring to this "increasingly severe form of ostracism," the Daily Express pointed out that, although it might be claimed the duke had been unwise in his decision to give up the throne if Mrs. Warfield could not be his queen, he had not broken the law in any degree nor had he damaged the country's constitution.

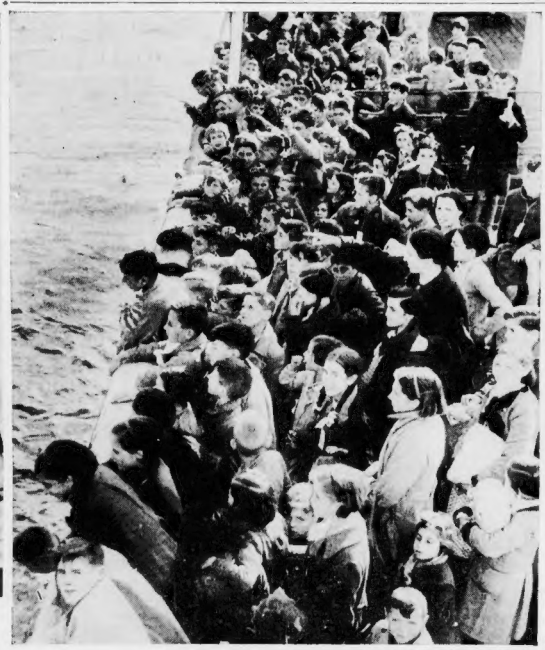
"If it is done in order to inflict punishment on Mrs. Warfield," the paper declared, "it must be pointed out that she has not transgressed the laws of the country either."

CLASH ON BILL TO KEEP OUT WAR BABIES

Basque Baby 'Propaganda' Assailed Here

EX-REP. THOMAS A. DORGAN

"This is not a case of charity alone . . . although everyone sympathizes . . . There is nothing so serious as the use of children for propaganda purposes."



(International News Photograph Service)

This group of Basque refugee children, similar to the 500 it is planned to bring to this country, is shown here on the steamship Habana being taken to France. Already a battle is waging here over the proposed admittance of the children into this country.

REV. DONALD LOTHROP

"There was no such opposition to caring for helpless Belgian children in the World War . . . All countries are doing their share."

URGE REFUGEE BAN IN STATE

As 500 Basque children, refugees of the Spanish civil war were being herded into an ancient hulk in Bilbao today, destined to be brought into the United States, charges were hurled that the state department is side-stepping the issue involving the spread of Communistic doctrines.

Certain that the purpose of the plan to bring the Basque babies to these shores is a scheme formulated by Red sympathizers, Senator R. Reynolds of North Carolina in a statement from Washington charged:

"The state department, in side-stepping the issue of barring these Basque children from the United States, proves that the department believes the transfer is unwise.

"I am going to ask that clearance papers for the 500 Basque babies now herded on the ancient liner Sinaia in Bilbao harbor be denied. We ought not to make an orphanage of the United States."

Meanwhile further Massachusetts opposition to the migration of Basque children to this country is expected today when the resolution committee of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, in 88th annual convention, will bring before the delegates a resolution, condemning the proposition as a Red maneuver.

The resolution, which will be presented at the final day of the three-day session at the New Ocean House in Swampscott, will also record the Foresters, representing more than 200 chapters in the state, as in accord with the demand of Representative John W. McCormack of Boston calling for a complete investigation of the American Board of Guardians for Basque children.

In Washington, Representative McCormack said he is certain the Basque children, now on shipboard and labelled for shipment to America, will never reach here.

"Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins believes the guardianship committee is moved by a 'humanitarian spirit,' but no effort is being made to facilitate the migration," said McCormack, who added: "The Labor Department, through the Bureau of Immigration, has absolute control over the situation."

The Basque babies according to Dr. Frank Bohn of New York, head of the guardianship committee, are aboard the ship in the Spanish harbor in charge of five Basque priests and several nuns.

The children, who are all Catholics, according to Bohn, are scheduled to sail for St. Jean de Luz, in France, from where efforts will be made to secure 500 visas from the United States consulate in Paris.

The vigorous protest of Catholic orders in Massachusetts has the unalterable support of William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston. This became known when Msgr. M. J. Splaine, addressing the Congress of Catholic Women in convention at St. Clement's Church, expressed the cardinal's message to the effect.

Featuring a hearing before the rules committee of the Massachusetts Legislature seeking the adoption of his petition to request Congress to investigate the American Board of Guardianship for Basque Children, Ex-Representative Thomas Dorgan refered to what he termed the viciousness of using small children for the purpose of Red propaganda.

DUKE NON-EXISTENT TO OFFICIAL BRITAIN

By DAVID P. SENTNER

London, May 27—A new element of mystery was injected into the circumstances surrounding the Duke of Windsor's forthcoming wedding today when spokesmen for the government, church and royal family emphatically denied any ban had been imposed on wedding guests.

Despite the general understanding, the government had asked King George to forbid any persons in government or crown positions to attend the ceremony next Wednesday, the spokesmen insisted officials would not think of "interfering" with the duke's plans.

"The government has never tendered advice to the King on this question," it was said at 10 Downing street. "The wedding is a purely private affair with which the government has nothing whatever to do."

"The duke is politically non-existent," another spokesman said, "and socially the government is not interested in him. Therefore there is no reason why we should interfere."

Sir Eric Mieville, chief press officer at Buckingham Palace, had this to say:

"There is no question of any palace pressure having been exercised on any individual invited to the wedding."

Despite these disclaimers and a similar one by a spokesman for the Archbishop of Canterbury, belief persisted that the archbishop and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin were responsible for the king's refusal to permit the Duke of Kent or any government or crown officials to attend.

Monckton, chancellor of the Duke of Windsor's duchy of Cornwall, went to Monts in a royal plane. Fielden was Windsor's personal pilot.

HEARING 'PLOT' CHARGED BY DeCELLES

doing," was Senator Oppenheimer's reply.

"I believe this investigation is a plot—" charged DeCelles but he was interrupted at that point as the committee objected.

"As far as this committee is concerned, it is not involved at all. But Cohen's attorney here in Boston concocted this plot and the testimony of witnesses presented here has been carefully rehearsed."

"Who is the attorney who has rehearsed the witnesses?" Senator Oppenheimer pressed.

"Does the committee urge me to name the attorney?" DeCelles asked.

When the committee insisted, DeCelles answered:

"Attorney Charles Griffiths of New York and Attorney Samuel Silverman of Boston. Silverman threatened me with this investigation prior to the time the bill (calling for the probe of the company) was filed."

Referring to the commissioner's testimony late yesterday afternoon when he stated he had been threatened thrice over the phone during the day preceding and on the day he filed the receivership petition closing the Commonwealth company, Representative Philip Barnet asked DeCelles:

"He (Silverman) wasn't the one who threatened you on the phone?"

The commissioner replied "no," but added that Silverman threatened him in the presence of 20 witnesses outside his office.

Commissioner DeCelles did not disclose the nature of the threat and the committee did not press him for an explanation.

"He (Silverman) even attempted to involve his excellency (Governor Hurley). De Celles continued, "but I have since ascertained from his excellency that he had nothing to do with it."

After Senator Oppenheimer told De Celles that he had received many letters commending the character of Count Castelli the insurance commissioner revealed he has an investigator in New Jersey "checking up" on Castelli.

ASKS FURTHER PROBE

DeCelles suggested that the committee select an impartial body to investigate "the characters of those men (officers of the defunct insurance company)." DeCelles stated that an investigation would show that his contentions against them would be supported.

The commissioner also stated that he is "checking up" on all the other "characters connected with the company."

After reading the letters he had received concerning Castelli into the record Chairman Oppenheimer remarked:

"As for justifying Mr. Cohen he will have to do that himself."

In previous testimony DeCelles termed Cohen the "mad genius of the insurance world." Cohen has as yet not appeared before the committee.

Commissioner DeCelles told the comittee he had never discussed John Curley's statement regarding the presidency of the company with former Governor.

DeCelles corroborated testimony given by Count Castelli that two conferences were held at the Jamaicaway home of former Governor Curley concerning the future of the insurance company.

"I want it clearly understood, however, that Governor Curley was not interfering with me in any way," DeCelles emphatically stated. "He was acting as mediator. I did not feel that I should stop any action I thought necessary until I got permission of His Excellency to take the action and I think that was the Governor's attitude."

It was during the conferences at the former Governor's home that the name of Judge Aaron Levy of the New York Supreme Court was first mentioned in connection with the Commonwealth company, DeCelles said.

NAMES HIS INFORMANT

DeCelles said he was of the belief that Judge Levy was "behind the scenes" in the insurance company. He based this belief, he said, on information which he had obtained from a confidential source. Although he has not publicly revealed the source of his information, DeCelles has given the man's name to members of the committee.

At Commissioner DeCelles insistence, Judge Levy came to Boston several weeks before the company was petitioned into receivership to discuss possible rehabilitation and the elimination of "objectionable features in it," the Commissioner testified.

"It was after this conference that I learned that Judge Levy was involved in the Metropolitan Mutual Automobile Insurance Company of New York in which Cohen is the principal figure," DeCelles said.

In response to questions by commission members, Commissioner DeCelles reiterated his belief that "New York racketeers who were also in the bonding game" were the powers behind the now defunct insurance company. He admitted, however, that the charge could not be proven.

2 Mothers Guilty In Olive Oil Theft

Two Cambridge mothers, who between them have 20 children, were given suspended 30-day sentences in East Cambridge district court today after they admitted a finding of larceny of a gallon of olive oil.

Mrs. Philomenia Castro, mother of 11 children, and Mrs. Annette Armendilo, who has nine, allegedly took the oil by secreting gallon cans beneath their skirts.

PROBE MISSING SHOE MACHINES AT PRISON

Two pieces of shoe machinery, allegedly spirited out of the shoe shop at the Deer Island House of Correction sometime after November of 1933, probably were shipped away to another shoe corporation in a transfer of machinery, it was revealed at a joint investigation by City Councilors and prison officials today.

The two machines, an "eyeleter" and an "indenter," leased from the United Shoe Machinery Corporation, have not been seen at the island since November 13, 1933, when a transfer of machinery was ordered, and the City of Boston has been paying royalties on them since.

In a statement made from his bedside at Boston City Hospital to Major George F. A. Mulcahy, master of the island, Charles Brady, an officer in the shoe shop, revealed that the two machines were probably lost in a transfer of machinery ordered by the late Michael J. McDonough, who died May 2.

RECALLS INCIDENT

That was in November of 1933, Brady said, and at the time he recalled McDonough engaging in a violent discussion with representatives of the United Shoe Machinery Corporation, when McDonough ordered another machine, manufactured by the Hamien Machine company, installed.

The "eyeleter" was packed up in the same box the new machine had come in and was ordered sent to Deer Island wharf, said Brady.

Speaking before the investigating committee today, George H. Donovan, superintendent of the shoe shop and a former assistant to McDonough, said:

"If I were to start looking for the machines, the first place I'd go would be to the Hamlen company, where they were probably shipped by mistake."

VALUES AT $225

The two machines, of a total value estimated at $225, were leased to the city at a cost of $5 a month, Penal Commissioner John J. Douglass said it was first brought to his attention that the machines might be missing on May 10 by Dr. George H. Schwartz, medical director of Deer Island.

Others attending the hearing today were members of the city council's committee on prisons, George W. Murray, chairman, of South Boston; Joseph J. Mellen, Charlestown; John J. Doherty, Roxbury; John J. McGrath, and Martin H. Tobin, both of Dorchester.

MACKEY BERTH BILL SIGNED

Governor Hurley today signed the bill authorizing the members of the Boston School Committee to fill the vacancy on the board caused by the death of Dr. Charles E. Mackey of South Boston.

Under the provisions of the bill, the vacancy will be filled through election of a new member by the four remaining members of the committee, and Mayor Mansfield and President John I. Fitzgerald of the city council.

The bill was introduced by Senator James W. Hennigan of Roxbury and was amended by the Legislature to carry the proviso that the member elected under the terms of the legislation shall not be eligible to succeed himself.

Gas Leaking From Home-Made Outlet Kills Aged Couple

Worcester, May 27—Gas, piped from an abandoned coffee stove, today caused the death of an aged couple, found dead in twin beds in their Dover street home, according to police.

Joseph C. Clark, 70, his wife, Laura, 75, and a pet canary were discovered by their son-in-law, Arnold L. Mitchell, who came to awaken them.

Illuminating gas had escaped from a rubber hose used to link up the outlet from which a meter long since had been removed, according to police and gas company inspectors.

Officials said that the meter had been taken from the home when electric lighting was installed, and that the cellar "lead in" had been sealed.

The rubber tubing had been connected to the lead-in pipe and similarly gas was connected to a heater in the elderly couple's bedroom, police said.

Fireman Freed In Auto Fatality

A warrant charging Fireman Arthur L. Jackson of Washington street, Dorchester, in connection with a fatal accident yesterday, was denied in Roxbury court today by Judge Albert F. Hayden.

Jackson, according to police, was driving the car of District Chief Charles McDonald which struck and killed John H. Dunster, 57, of Smith street, Roxbury. The accident occurred in Huntington avenue, near Francis street, while the firemen were responding to an alarm for a blaze in a parked automobile.

ROCKEFELLER'S DEBT TO FATHER

Acquired His Business Methods Early

John D. Rockefeller, in the third chapter of the informal autobiography he wrote after his retirement from active business, give the magic passwords which made him the world's greatest financial genius. He describes what he labels "The Difficult Art of Getting."

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, SR.

(Distributed exclusively by Universal Service, by special arrangement with Doubleday Doran & Co. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

To my father I owe a great debt in that he himself trained me to practical ways.

He was engaged in different enterprises; he used to tell me about these things, explaining their significance; and he taught me the principles and methods of business.

From early boyhood I kept a little book which I remember I called Ledger A—and this little volume is still preserved—containing my receipts and expenditures as well as an account of the small sums that I was taught to give away regularly.

Naturally, people of modest means lead a closer family life than those who have plenty of servants to do everything for them. I count it a blessing that I was of the former class.

When I was seven or eight years old I engaged in my first business enterprise with the assistance of my mother. I owned some turkeys, and she presented me with the curds from the milk to feed them.

I took care of the birds myself, and sold them all in business-like fashion. My receipts were all profit, as I had nothing to do with the expense account, and my records were kept as carefully as I knew how.

We thoroughly enjoyed this little business affair, and I can still close my eyes, and distinctly see the gentle and dignified birds walking quietly along the brook and through the woods, cautiously stealing the way to their nests. To this day I enjoy the sight of a flock of turkeys, and never miss an opportunity to study them.

Recalls Whipping

My mother was a good deal of a disciplinarian, and upheld the standard of the family with a birch switch when it showed a tendency to deteriorate.

Once, when I was being punished for some unfortunate doings which had taken place in the village school, I felt called upon to explain after the whipping had begun that I was innocent of the charge.

"Never mind," said my mother, "we have started in on this whipping, and it will do for the next time."

This attitude was maintained to its final conclusion in many ways. One night, I remember, we boys could not resist the temptation to go skating in the moonlight, notwithstanding the fact that we had been expressly forbidden to skate at night.

Almost before we got fairly started we heard a cry for help, and found a neighbor, who had broken through the ice, was in danger of drowning. By pushing a pole to him we succeeded in fishing him out, and restored him safe and sound to his grateful family.

As we were not generally expected to save a man's life every time we skated, my brother, William, and I felt that there were mitigating circumstances connected with this particular disobedience which might be taken into account in the final judgment, but this idea proved to be erroneous.

The Oil King tells an interesting story of skating at night against parental orders, and how he and his brother, William G. Rockefeller, aided in saving a neighbor from drowning. Read this series. Every paragraph is interesting.

Although the plan had been to send me to college, it seemed best at sixteen that I should leave the high school in which I had nearly completed the course and go into a commercial college in Cleveland for a few months.

They taught bookkeeping and some of the fundamental principles of commercial transactions. This training, though it lasted only a few months, was very valuable to me.

But how to get a job—that was the question. I tramped the streets for days and weeks, seeking merchants and storekeepers if they didn't want a boy, but the offer of my services met with little appreciation.

No one wanted a boy, and very few showed any overwhelming anxiety to talk with me on the subject. At last one man on the Cleveland docks told me that I might come back after the noonday meal. I was elated; it now seemed that I might get a start.

I was in a fever of anxiety lest I should lose this one opportunity that I had unearthed. When finally at what seemed to me the time, I presented myself to my would-be employer:

"We will give you a chance," he said, but not a word passed between us about pay.

This was September 26, 1855. I joyfully went to work. The name of the firm was Hewit & Tuttle.

In beginning the work I had some advantages. My father's training, as I have said, was practical, the course at the commercial college had taught me the rudiments of business, and I thus had a groundwork to build upon.

I was fortunate, also, in working under the supervision of the bookkeeper, who was a fine disciplinarian, and well disposed toward me.

When January, 1856, arrived, Mr. Tuttle presented me with $50 for my three months' work, which was no doubt all that I was worth, and it was entirely satisfactory.

Wins Promotion

For the next year, with $25 a month, I kept my position, learning the details and clerical work connected with such a business. It was a wholesale produce commission and forwarding concern, my department being particularly the office duties.

Just above me was the bookkeeper for the house, and he received $2000 a year salary in lieu of his share of the profits of the firm of which he was a member. At the end of the first fiscal year when he left I assumed his clerical and bookkeeping work, for which I received the salary of $500.

As I look back upon this term of business apprenticeship, I can see that its influence was vitally important in its relations to what came after. To begin with, my work was done in the offices of the firm itself. I was always present when they talked of their affairs, laid out their plans, and decided upon a course of action.

I thus had an advantage over other boys of my age, who were quicker and who could figure and write better than I.

Thus it happened that my duties were vastly more interesting than those of an office-boy in a large house today. I thoroughly enjoyed the work. Gradually the auditing of accounts was left in my hands. All the bills were first passed upon by me, and I took this duty very seriously.

One day, I remember, I was in a neighbor's office, when the local plumber presented himself with a bill about a yard long. This neighbor was one of those very busy men. He was connected with what seemed to me an unlimited number of enterprises. He merely glanced at this tiresome bill, turned to the bookkeeper, and said:

"Please pay this bill."

As I was studying this same plumber's bill in great detail, checking every item, if only for a few cents, and finding it to be greatly to the firm's interest to do so, this casual way of conducting affairs did not appeal to me.

I had trained myself to the point of view doubtless held by many young men in business today, that my check on a bill was the executive act which released my employer's money from the till and was attended with more responsibility than the spending of my own funds.

I made up my mind that such business methods could not succeed.

Passing bills, collecting rents, adjusting claims, and work of this kind brought me in association with a great variety of people. I had to learn how to get on with all these different classes, and still keep relations between them and the house pleasant.

One particular kind of negotiation came to me which took all the skill I could master to bring to a successful end.

Ingenuity Taxed

We would receive, for example, a shipment of marble from Vermont to Cleveland. This involved handling by railroad, canal and lake boats. The cost of losses or damage had to be some how fixed between these three different carriers, and it taxed all the ingenuity of a boy of seventeen to work out this problem to the satisfaction of all concerned, including my employers.

But I thought the task no hardship, and so far as I can remember I never had any disagreement of moment with any of these transportation interests. This experience in conducting all sorts of transactions at such an impressionable age, with the helping hand of my superiors to fall back upon in an emergency—was highly interesting to me.

It was my first step in learning the principle of negotiation, of which I hope to speak later.

SURPRISE VISIT TO FIN. COM. BY WADSWORTH

Less than 48 hours after his return from Europe Elliot Wadsworth, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, today appeared unexpectedly and voluntarily before the finance commission in connection with the commission's investigation of the Codman Hill Construction Co.

The commission is probing the awarding of an alleged $70,000 "gift contract" to the Codman Construction Co. by the trustees of the George Robert White fund.

GOES INTO CONFERENCE

At the School street quarters of the finance commission, Wadsworth and Secretary Robert E. Cunniff went into a conference with Attorney George R. Farnum, special counsel for the investigation.

It was reported at City Hall that Wadsworth had protested the granting of the contract at a trustees' meeting several days prior to the passing of the order by the fifty-eight authorizing the investigation.

The alleged "gift contract" was passed as an emergency order to repair three Boylston street, Back Bay, buildings owned by the White Fund.

SEEN AS WITNESS

Because of Wadsworth's surprise appearance today, it was believed he will appear as a witness at the public hearing June 2.

On the eve of the commission's investigation, the books and records of the Codman Construction Company were reported stolen. Yesterday in Suffolk Court Judge Harold P. Williams ordered two officers of the company to produce the books before the finance commission next Wednesday.

REVERE TRUCK BLAZE PROBED

Police today were investigating the possibility that a fire that destroyed a cleaning truck on Malden street, Revere, and burned the driver, was started by disgruntled strikers who put a time bomb in the machine.

The investigation was begun when Revere Fire Captain William Morrissey reported that the fire might have been started by a bomb due to the fact that the flames spread so rapidly through the entire body of the truck, not along the gas or ignition lines as they usually do.

John Mario, 38, of Fernwood avenue, Revere, told police he was driving the small truck that belongs to the State Cleaners of Somerham along Malden street when it suddenly burst into flames.

He was trapped in the cab, and his life was saved only when passers dragged him free. He received burns about the hand, that were treated by firemen.

Damage to the truck was set at $200.

"Dust Bowl" Area Drenched by Rains

Amarillo, Texas, May 27 (AP)—The "dust bowl's" biggest rain in five years elated farmers today in a 5000-square mile area.

Engagement Ban Due for Queen

London, May 27 (AP)—Queen Elizabeth is "fatigued by her public appearances," and is considering cancelling some of her engagements, the weekly magazine Canada said today.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

Damon Runyon

At regular intervals, some one of our American cities feels the urge to put on a big show, usually in the name of an anniversary of a stirring event in the history of the city, or of the state in which the city is located. But to great excuse is really necessary once the urge hits.

The go-getters of a community band together, and work like the proverbial dogs for anywhere from six months to a couple of years, making plans, raising money, making more plans, raising more money, until the final result is a fair, or exposition, or carnival, or whatever they title it, of varying size and merit.

No matter how big, or how good it is, you may be sure that the best the go-getters receive for the efforts is criticism that it should have been bigger, and better.

Now, the primary idea of the show, of course, is to attract attention, and business, to a city. But, it has been our observation that eventually so much civic loyalty and pride is injected into these enterprises that mercenary considerations become subordinated to the determination to make it a little bit the best show that ever has been produced.

GREATEST SHOW

We borrowed the general idea of these shows many years ago from the Old World, where the cities for centuries have been going in for fairs, and fetes, and public displays of one kind and another. In some instances we topped the best the Old World ever produced, and right now we are engaged in fixing up a show that is expected to set a new all-time high.

This is the world's fair that New York city will pitch on the Flushing meadows in 1939. The big town has remained immune from the urge of civic display, in this particular form, for many years, but now that it has become infected, our local go-getters are carrying on with an energy that at times amounts to downright violence.

Our American expositions, or fairs, or whatever they called them, of bygone years, generally wound up with big beers on actual building and operation costs, though in most cases this loss was probably stood off to some extent by the increased business to the hotelkeepers and other business men of a community, and by the employment that a large show necessarily produces.

MILLIONS PROFIT

Then Chicago, with its last big World's Fair, said to itself:

"What's the use of going to all this expense to run a show just part of one year? Why not stretch it into next year?"

So the Chicagoans established a new tradition with a two-year world's fair, and, while we do not have the official returns at hand, we understand that the fair stood off the building and operation cost, and to that you may add as clear profit the millions of dollars that poured into the channels of Chicago trade during the fair.

Now Cleveland and Dallas have borrowed the Chicago idea, and are stretching the expositions that they ran last year across part of 1937, and Fort Worth is continuing a program of festivity and display that was inaugurated last summer. It seems to us that there is much common sense in these continuations, or sequels. Nowadays, fair builders put up many of their structures with some thought of permanence, so why let them stand idle?

We judge that Cleveland, and Dallas, and Fort Worth, too, are going in for the gay and festive in their continuations, as we have a couple of friends involved in the proceedings who are advising us by almost daily bulletins that they are arranging for joy to be practically unconfined in both cities.

TWO NEW SHOWS

In Cleveland this Saturday night our friend, Mr. Billy Rose, opens what he calls an aquacade at the exposition, and in Dallas, another friend, Mr. George Preston Marshall, is all set to shoot with a sports carnival, and a big girl show.

Or perhaps we should say a big show with girls. The girls are not necessarily big. Indeed, they are of that uniform size for which Mr. George Preston Marshall, in his recent pre-matrimonial days, was somewhat famous, which is to say about 6's. However, it should be added that Mr. Marshall is making more of a point of his sports carnival than of the girls.

Mr. Billy Rose, who is likewise the genius of the Fort Worth proceedings, is throwing a tremendous array of talent into tanks in Cleveland. He has Johnny Weissmuller, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, and over so many other aquatic marvels, and he is so enthused about his show that he becomes positively indiscreet in a telegram to us.

Mr. Billy Rose says in this telegram:

"Think it will be more novel and perhaps more exciting than Casa Manana show last year at Fort Worth."

With no special animus toward Mr. Billy Rose, but in pursuit of our well known good neighbor policy, we shall at once relay this telegram to Mr. Amon Carter, of Fort Worth, and we herewith disclaim any responsibility for Mr. Billy Rose's life or limb the next time he visits that lively city.

4 Burn to Death As Plane Crashes

The dead: Rod Keenan, pilot and a University of Southern California engineering student; Harry F. Esme, executive of a Los Angeles oil leasing company; Mrs. D. B. Fauntleroy, mother of two children and former wife of Cedric Fauntleroy of New York and Mrs. C. W. Whitney, Carmel, Cal., socialite.

Victim Former Wife Of N. H. Track Aide

Mrs. D. B. Fauntleroy, mother of two children, killed in the Santa Maria, Cal., plane crash, is the former wife of Cedric E. Fauntleroy, treasurer of the New Hampshire Jockey Club, operators of Rockingham Park.

Fauntleroy, himself a World War air ace, has been in Salem, N. H., the past several weeks preparing for the spring meeting at Rockingham which gets underway June 21.

The booklet has engravings of all stamps from 1847 to January 1, 1937, and will be sold by the government printing office in Washington.

NAZI TO REPLY TO MUNDELEIN

Berlin, May 27 (INS)—German Catholics waited tensely today for Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels' speech tomorrow in reply to Cardinal Mundelein.

An official announcement said the propaganda minister would give a fitting answer to the cardinal regarding the morality trials of Catholic priests in Germany. Goebbels' speech will be broadcast.

ROCKEFELLER BURIAL RITES IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, May 27 (INS)—John Davison Rockefeller came back today to his final rest in the city where he started his business career 80 years ago.

The body of the 97-year-old multimillionaire and philanthropist was returned here in a special railroad car from Tarrytown, N. Y., for burial in the family plot at Lake View Cemetery.

The Rev. Willard S. Richardson of New York, a friend of the Rockefeller family, officiated at private funeral services at the grave. The theme of the brief ritual was:

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

As the casket, dark mahogany covered with orchids and green foliage was taken from the train, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., present ruler of the family dynasty, alighted from the other special car. With him were his five sons, John D., III, Nelson, David, Winthrop and Laurence, and John Yerdi, for many years personal valet to the oil king.

Other members of the funeral party followed. They included Rev. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice, son-in-law and daughter of Rockefeller, Sr.; Mr. and Mrs. Spelman Prentice, son and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Prentice; David M. Milton, son-in-law of Rockefeller, Jr.; John Rockefeller Prentice and Miss Mary Ade Prentice, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice; Michael Morrissey, second valet; Holden Wood and Lawrence Prior, watchmen and close personal friends of Rockefeller, Sr., and a representative of the Ivy Lee & F.J. Ross public relations firm.

We are particularly glad we bought a Servel Electrolux because we have found it is not only silent all the time, but it also saves a lot of money on food bills and running expense. It has never given us any trouble, either, in over four years of constant service.
MRS. BESSIE WAGNER
32 Maxim Ave., Hough's Neck

One of the things we like best about the apartment we live in is our Servel Electrolux refrigerator. It is so quiet as to be, and since our gas bills are always low, I know it costs very little to run. In my opinion no other refrigerator has as many advantages.
H. PAUL KELJIK
216 Beenway St., Boston

When you live in a small apartment as we do, a silent refrigerator is worth money. I would be glad to pay a little extra each month for our silent Servel Electrolux, but as a matter of fact, it costs us less to run than any refrigerator we have ever had.

THRIFTY BOSTONIANS
SAVE MORE WITH
SERVEL ELECTROLUX
the silent, different refrigerator!

Year after year, it gives you amazing operating economy, freedom from costly upkeep, because its freezing system HAS NO MOVING PARTS

WHEN you see Servel Electrolux in the stores or at the homes of friends, here's something to remember: this is the modern refrigerator that an army of enthusiastic Bostonians agree is "the biggest money-saver of them all!"

It cuts refrigeration bills because it runs for only a few cents a day . . . and keeps on running at this same low cost throughout its long life. It cuts food bills, too—provides fullest food protection every minute. And it steers clear of upkeep expense.

The reason for this greater economy of Servel Electrolux is its different, simpler operation. There are no moving parts in its entire freezing system. A tiny gas flame circulates the refrigerant that produces constant cold and cubes of ice—without noise, without wear.

70,000 STEEL WORKERS QUIT PLANTS IN 5 STATES

Youngstown, O., May 27 (AP)—An orderly strike of more than 70,000 workers—called by the Committee for Industrial Organization to enforce its demand for bargaining contracts—crippled steel operations today in five states.

Fires were banked in great furnaces that had been operating for weeks at the highest production rate since 1929.

In Ohio's Mahoning Valley alone, 22,500 workers were idle, and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee claimed a 100 per cent tieup of plants of Republic Steel Corp. and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., vast independent steel producers which have expressed willingness to bargain with the CIO affiliate but have insisted signing of a contract would lead to a closed shop.

25,000 IDLE IN CHICAGO

In the Chicago area, where 25,000 were affected, the strike order from SWOC'S chairman, Philip Murray, shut down plants of the Inland Steel Company—third of the three independents against which SWOC was aiming its current chapter of the organizing effort John L. Lewis started with the signing of a contract by giant U. S. Steel Corporation.

Fifteen thousand more men were idle in Ohio plants outside the Mahoning Valley.

Republic spokesmen said several of its mills were operating, but union leaders countered with the claims that only a few remained in the plants. In the Buffalo area, C. I. O. leaders claimed a two-thirds shutdown; the company said most men were working.

The first test of the strike's effectiveness came at 11 o'clock last night, when the shifts changed. The second test was at 7 a. m. today, time for another shift change. At both times only minor skirmishes occurred at most places.

DISORDERS MINOR

Other plants, including those of Republic at South Buffalo and South Chicago, were picketed, but continued operations as husky milmen acted against the three firms which employ one-seventh of the basic industry's workers at cities from the Gulf to Canada and from coast to coast.

FOREMAN WOUNDED

Of the three firms whose production represents approximately 16 per cent of the industry's total output only Republic—second largest producer independent of the U. S. Steel Corp.—attempted to operate.

Scattered reports of minor disorder came after Philip Murray, SWOC chieftain, announced the decision to strike following a three-hour conference with subordinates here.

At Canton, where one of eight Republic units continued to operate, shotgun charge felled Franklin P. Manly, foreman at the subsidiary Berger Company, wounding him in both hands and both thighs as he fled, he said, from strike pickets.

More than a score of brawny mill workers were arrested, including SWOC district director, John P. Riffe, on charges of unlawful assembly when police forced a jeering throng from Republic's South Chicago plants. A force of 600 policemen was mobilized and held in readiness.

CALL MASS MEETING

Leonard Ross, C. I. O. textile organizer, reported he was hit over the head as he stood in a crowd watching the South Buffalo picket line. C. I. O. leaders called a mass meeting of workers "to instruct them in strike technique."

Executives at two Pittsburgh district plants of Republic said they expected their workers to continue at their jobs.

"All of the mechanics have been instructed to take care of the situation in accordance with custom," declared Murray after reading the strike order. "The necessary maintenance men will be furnished each company by local lodges and committees. It is the purpose of our organization to conduct the strike peacefully."

SLEEP IN PLANTS

The Birmingham, Ala., area, was exempt from the original strike order but Murray said SWOC leaders would meet there today to consider action in the locality where Republic's southern activity is centered.

A number of the large independents' mill remained in operation. A spokesman said Republic had sufficient men inside its South Chicago plant to continue operations in all departments and sleeping accommodations were prepared in the plant.

The Steel & Tubes, Corrigan and Upson units were closed at Cleveland along with Truscon, but a Republic spokesman said Truscon would be opened today. Executives of a Republic plant at Cumberland, said the 400 employes there were not organized and that no trouble was expected.

An executive said the night shift in the Union Drawn Steel Co. plant at Beaver Falls, Pa., remained at work and at Republic's Dilworth-Porter division in Pittsburgh operations were expected to be resumed today.

Strong picket lines marched in front of Inland and Youngstown plants in Indiana Harbor but no disorder was reported.

PICKET PLANTS

Three hundred marchers picketed Republic's South Buffalo, N. Y., plant when shifts changed. CIO Leader Hugh Thompson charged he was jostled by members of the Buffalo police department. The company's Buffalo spokesman, Martin M. Stearns, claimed the pickets were brought by bus from Pittsburgh.

Twenty pickets were arrested after the brush with police outside the South Chicago Republic plant. They were the first arrested in the strike. Republic's two plants at Elyria, O., 25 miles west of Cleveland, were closed.

The decision of the young CIO affiliate to launch its greatest major attack on the busy steel industry was reached after several weeks of threats against the independents for refusing to sign a SWOC contract to represent the union's members.

Republic said the CIO unit's eventual aims were a closed shop and the check-off system of dues collection to which the concern constantly declared opposition. Under the check-off system of deducts dues from the worker's pay check and turns it over to the union. Lewis' United Mine Workers have such an arrangement.

"Shoot to Kill" Charge Made by CIO Chief

Pittsburgh, May 27 (INS)—Philip Murray, CIO steel union leader, today publicly charged Republic Steel Corporation officials, whose plants are now strike-bound, issued orders to their police to "shoot to kill."

"It is now apparent," said Murray in a telegram to T. M. Girdler, president of Republic Steel, "that you or your subordinates have issued orders to shoot to kill and before the American public you stand indicted in a deliberate attempt to murder."

Troop Officers Watch Strikers in Ohio

Columbus, O., May 27 (INS)—Adjutant General Emil E. Marx today dispatched two Ohio National Guard officers to Youngstown and Canton to act as observers at the strike-torn plants of Republic Steel Corporation.

General Marx said he had instructed the officers to keep a close check on developments at the plants and make frequent reports to his office here.

Nova Scotia Mine Strike

'We Didn't Have a Chance'

Picture taken at height of riot outside Ford plant at Dearborn, Mich., yesterday as Ford men attacked Richard Frankensteen, leading CIO organizer (back to camera), as he attempted to distribute handbills to Ford workers. Frankensteen was badly beaten.

Stay-Down Strike By Coal Miners In Second Week

Gillespie, Ill., May 27 (AP)—Stay-down strikers in the Superior Coal Co.'s No. 4 mine at Wilsonville began the second week of their demonstration today, cheered by support of Local No. 1 of the Progressive Miners of America, pledged in a meeting last night.

Rejecting the plea of representatives of the state organization that the strikers abandon their underground quarters and "abide by the contract," 1600 members of the Gillespie local, in a voice vote, proclaimed their support of the strike.

More than 350 miners took possession of the shaft last Saturday, demanding immediate acceptance of a plan to share work with 300 idle men.

Many of the 200 workers who came out of the mine to attend the meeting took part in the bitter argument over sanction of the strike which raged for more than three hours. Returning to the mine late last night, they announced no change in their determination to continue the strike indefinitely."

Steel Chief Sees Labor, Tax Perils

New York, May 27 (INS)—High taxes, deliberately-fostered labor unrest and "shocking violations of the law in industrial centers" are threatening the future stability of the steel industry, Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company said today.

He spoke as retiring president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, holding its annual meeting here.

Grace's address was evenly divided between expressed satisfaction with the present condition of the steel industry and predictions of disaster for the future unless taxes are reduced and labor assured that industry is not its enemy.

"Employment is at a new high level with 377,000 men at work," he said.

"But I should like to introduce a word of caution. Industry cannot be expected to practice all the economy. Let's give the consuming public a few billions by reducing taxes. Unless costs can be held in check the future may be disappointing."

After pointing out that the average earnings of major steel companies during the past 12 years have been less than 4 per cent on invested capital, Grace turned to the labor situation.

"There can be no better investment than liberal pay to labor," he said.

Providence Faces Meat Firms Strike

Providence, May 27 (AP)—Retail markets in Greater Providence were putting in extra heavy stocks of beef and other meat for the pre-holiday week-end trade today as employes of about 20 meat packing and wholesale firms prepared to take a strike vote tonight. The workers say employers have failed to heed demands for wage increases and a 40-hour week.

2 UNION ORGANIZERS BEATEN IN DEARBORN

Detroit, May 27 (INS)—Two volunteer organizers for the United Automobile Workers Union were beaten up today in front of Henry Ford's main plant in Dearborn, marking the second outbreak of fighting there in as many days.

Those hurt today were Albert Noeradian and James Kelley, both UAW members. They charged they were dragged from their car and slugged as they drove along a public highway in front of the plant.

Dearborn police said they had not heard of the attack.

Meantime, John L. Lewis, CIO chief, sent Richard T. Frankensteen, one of the score of unionists hurt in the riot at the Ford motor plant yesterday, the following wire:

"Sorry Dick. Keep your poise. It is merely an instance."

The National Labor Relations Board today started an investigation into the riot at the Ford plant in which more than a score of UAW union members were beaten as they attempted to pass out union handbills.

Frank Bowen, NLRB director here, said if the petition filed by the UAW was justified, he would sign a formal complaint against the Ford company and order a public hearing.

Two other probes also were under way into the fighting, one by the U. S. Senate's civil liberties committee and another by the office of County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea.

Two of the unionists hurt in the fighting yesterday were still in hospitals. The riot forecast a long summer of open warfare between loyal Ford workers and the UAW.

Maurice Sugar, attorney for CIO here, immediately filed a protest with the National Labor Relations Board as a result of the fighting, while chief UAW organizer Richard T. Frankensteen threatened, "We will go back and give them a dose of their own medicine."

The union, it was learned, was secretly selecting 500 of its husky members for a new attempt to distribute the "Unionism not Fordism" handbills. Date of the second attempt was being kept secret.

TEXTILE WAGE BOARD URGED

Washington, May 27 (INS)—Fighting to save the "little NRA" textile bill, Representative Ellenbogen (D.), Pennsylvania, today warned that a national wages and hours board not supplemented by additional boards for each major industry "must ultimately collapse".

"To me, it is obvious that a lone agency could never perform the stupendous task of fixing minimum wages and maximum hours for all industry," Ellenbogen, sponsor of the "little NRA" textile bill, declared.

"If the additional boards are not set up now, we will eventually be forced to do it to save the program, because it is the only intelligent way to approach the problem."

Secretary of Labor Perkins appearing before a House labor subcommittee, declared establishment of independent labor boards would be "unfortunate."

Earlier this week, Representative Connery (D.) of Massachusetts, House labor committee chairman, asserted the textile bill had been "shelved by the President" in favor of the administration's bill setting up a national labor standards board to fix hours and wages for all industry.

Fire Sounds Own 'Alarm' in Machine

Springfield, May 27 (AP)—A short circuit in an automobile early today in the garage of Dr. James J. Carr, which set fire to the auto, at the same time caused the horn to sound loudly and continuously, called attention to the fire, and enabled the firemen to prevent spread to the building, though the car was destroyed.

NEW VIOLENCE THREATENS IN DYERS' STRIKE

Police of Malden, Cambridge, Waltham and other Greater Boston communities guarded 28 cleansing and dyeing establishments today, as new violence threatened in a strike called by union groups backed by John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Early clashes between loyal workers, strikers and police sent two men to the hospital and resulted in 14 arrests.

CIO leaders said today that 2300 cleansing and dyeing workers had quit their jobs and that 800 small tailoring and delivery shops had closed in sympathy with the strike.

Of the 28 cleansing and dyeing firms affected, seven have agreed to demands of strikers for increased wages and a 40-hour week, CIO spokesmen claimed.

Strike Organizers William Z. Casper and Jacob Prager said they would attend a peace conference at the State House today but expected it to "come to nothing, like a lot of conferences."

Most tense of today's situations was in Malden where 150 men and women employes of the Golden Bell Cleansing Company's plant in Eastern avenue held possession of the shop, defying strikers to keep them from doing their work as usual.

They announced themselves on a "sit-down" against the CIO walkout.

Fearing that strike pickets would prevent them from entering the building, if they went home, the loyal "sit-downers" stayed over night in the plant.

The management supplied them with food and blankets.

Malden police kept a special detail of officers outside the Golden Bell building through the night and reinforced this guard with all available extra men today.

Strike pickets and strike sympathizers were gathering again at the plant after rain had temporarily dispersed them.

Other danger points today, from the police point of view, were the Shea Cleansing company plant in Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and the Peter Pan Cleansers' shop on South street, Waltham.

Strike pickets at both places were on hand early, determined to prevent loyal workers from going to their jobs, if possible.

I. N. F. COURT GIVES BANQUET

The thirty-first anniversary banquet of Lady Montgomery Court, Irish National Foresters was given last evening in Hibernian Hall, Cambridge, with an attendance of more than 400 members and friends.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Anna Mahoney, Julia Foley, Janet Manning and Mrs. Mary O'Connell.

Sylvester Murray was toastmaster and presented the following speakers: Councillor James J. Mellen, Representative John Patrick Doherty, James Riley, Michael Murphy and Theodore A. Glynn, clerk of the Roxbury court, who represented former Governor Curley.

Pay, Hour Law Hit by AFL

Sentiment Against 'Legal Wage' Plan

Cincinnati, May 27 (AP)—American Federation of Labor opposition to the administration's wage and hour bill appeared likely today in the light of sentiment expressed privately by Federation chieftains.

William Green, A. F. of L. president, expects the federation's executive council to declare its stand on the measure before the end of its current meeting.

Hotel lobby talk plainly indicated most of the council members felt men's wages should be fixed by collective bargaining rather than by federal law. A rigid minimum, they said, would tend to peg wages and would make every effort to raise pay doubly hard.

DIVIDED SENTIMENT

Sentiment on the hours and child labor provisions was divided.

Meantime, the council pushed forward with its campaign against John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization on many fronts. Traditional A. F. of L. craft lines were forgotten for the time being in the battle's heat.

International officers of the Progressive Miners of America, rival to Lewis' United Mine Workers, awaited an expected invitation to apply formally for an A. F. of L. charter.

DISCIPLINARY ACTION

The council prepared to follow suspension of 10 of the original CIO unions with similar discipline against other unions.

Green disclosed that he still was trying to settle the oldest craft-industrial union fight in the federation—between the teamsters (truck drivers) and the brewery workers. This scrap over which union should take in beer truck drivers has been on practically since the federation started.

12 Convicts Sent To Norfolk Colony

As a move to reduce the number of prisoners at Charlestown State Prison, 12 men were transferred under guard to the Norfolk Prison Colony today. The transfer reduced the number of prisoners at Charlestown to 868.

POLICE GUARD SCREW PLANT

Worcester, May 27—The threat of "broken heads" for remaining loyal workers in the Reed Prince Manufacturing Company, a steel screw plant, brought out police guards today.

The threat was reported to Police Chief Thomas F. Foley by Ernest C. Boyd, company vice-president, who said he had been hailed outside the doors by two officials of the local union, an affiliate of CIO.

GIRL INNOCENT IN AX MURDER, SAYS LAWYER

Jersey City, N. J., May 27 (INS)—Gladys MacKnight's attorney, J. Lewis Kennedy, declared in his summation to the jury today that the 17-year-old high school graduate is innocent of the hatchet murder of her mother, Mrs. Helen MacKnight.

He branded Donald Wightman, 19, Gladys' former sweetheart, as the slayer, saying Wightman killed the mother "when he saw the girl he loved being threatened with a knife."

Kennedy spent an hour and forty-five minutes summing up. When he was finished, court adjourned until afternoon when Donald's counsel, Colonel George T. Vickers, will sum up.

CITES LACK OF BLOOD

"There were discrepancies in the story Donald told you. That indicates the story he told is not the story of what happened. It leaves unimpeached the story told you by Gladys," said Kennedy.

"His lips were on the level with the top of Mrs. MacKnight's head (during the struggle in the MacKnight kitchen). How, could he have held her while four or five blows were being struck at her scalp—one of the most blood-filled parts of the body—and no blood got on his face?

"The answer is it didn't happen that way."

Kennedy reminded the jury that evidence had been presented designed to show Gladys as "cold and without feeling." He pointed out that Gladys "is a little different than most girls of 17."

"She shows more self-reliance," he explained. "She endeavors to cover up her real feelings and doesn't want the world to know what she is going through. Under standing this girl is absolutely necessary to the solution of this case."

SAYS HEIGHT A FACTOR

Kennedy pointed out that Gladys is 5 feet, 3 inches in height. Her mother was 5 feet, 6 inches tall.

"How could Gladys strike blows over her own head?" Kennedy asked. "None of the wounds on Mrs. MacKnight's head was below the hair line.

"Isn't it entirely possible that Donald, who is 6 feet, 1 inch tall, reached over Gladys's head or shoulders and struck Mrs. MacKnight without Gladys knowing what was being done?"

The lawyer contended Gladys was being tried by the newspapers and public opinion up to the time she was placed on trial, and "she had already been found guilty."

He declared the police had "things all mixed up" the grand jury both indicted both Gladys and Donald.

"I don't say the police framed them, but they didn't make a proper investigation to bring out all the true facts," he said.

Cleary May Head Police Barracks

Corporal Richard Cleary of the West Bridgewater state police barracks was seen today as the successor of Corporal Robert E. Thompson, whose resignation as head of the Lunenburg barracks was accepted late yesterday by Public Safety Commissioner Alfred G. Kirk.

Thompson, credited with a major part in solving the Sutton's widely publicized "American Tragedy" canoe murder, declared he resigned because of friction between himself and town officials who objected to his raids.

Thompson said he had raided a "pin-ball" game where school children had been squandering lunch money and as a result was complained of to his superiors. No formal statement on the case has been made by state police officials.

Corporal Cleary joined the force in 1928. He is married, lives in Danvers and has one child.

Rev. Eliot Again Heads Society

For the fifth consecutive year, the Rev. Christopher Eliot, of Cambridge, was today re-elected president of the Unitarian Historical Society at the 27th annual meeting of the organization held at King's Chapel, Boston.

Cooperating with the anniversary week of the American Unitarian Association, the local society moved its date of conference forward to coincide with that of the national organization.

The Rev. Dan Huntington Fenn, minister of the First Church in Chestnut Hill, was elected to the board of directors.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 2 spoonfuls of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisons and waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Sleep-Walker Bike Riding—But Awake

A 13-year-old boy sleepwalker, reported wandering by his mother, went for a stroll today but only on his bicycle to retrieve his tennis racket which he had left on a Stoneham court. The youngster Carl Duggay of Third street, Medford, was reported missing by his mother, Mrs. Duggay told police that Carl frequently walked in his sleep.

While police were searching for the boy, he returned home. He said he didn't want to bother and awaken his mother when he left.

Benson and Wife Face Trial June 9

Jack Benson, 26, former inmate of Michigan State Prison, and his young wife Rhea are to go to trial June 9 in Federal Court, Assistant United States Attorney Frank W. Tomasello announced today. They are charged with kidnaping a Lawrence taxi driver. The latter, Roland Robichaud, identified them as two of three people who held him up at gunpoint in Daisy street, Lawrence, December 4, 1936, and forced him to drive them as far as University City, Missouri.

ABANDONED BABES SOB FOR MOTHER

Two sad-eyed little tots, Mary and Robert O'Mara, 3 and 11 years old, were in the Chardon street home today anxiously awaiting the return of their mother, the object of a police search upon complaint of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children that Baby Mary and Brother Robert had been abandoned.

The two small children, weeping and very lonesome, were brought to the Roxbury Court yesterday by Arnold Waterman of the S.P.C.C. who said that the pair were neglected children. Meantime police searched for Mrs. Jane O'Mara, said by Agent Arnold to be the mother of the girl and boy.

The cases came to the attention of the society upon complaint of Mrs. Bertha Virgin of Moreland street, Roxbury, that Mary and Bobby had been left at her boarding house for children on May 4 by the mother, who had not appeared since that date.

Dancer Is Found Slain in Room

New York, May 27 (AP)—Edward F. Dolan, 57, dancer and female impersonator, today was beaten or strangled to death in his apartment in the "House of All Nations," a rooming house so called years ago because of the wide racial diversification of its residents.

Boris Pachecowich, who lived directly below Dolan, said that he heard fighting and furniture being banged about late last night in Dolan's apartment.

Quebec Ex-Premier Escapes Drowning

Quebec, May 27 (CP)—L. A. Taschereau, 70-year-old former premier of Quebec, today saved his life by swimming to shore in the cold waters of the Laurentides after his fishing boat capsized.

Despite heavy clothing, the elderly statesman reached shore without incident.

Nantasket Cruise Benefit Attracts Members of Smart Set

By BETTY ALDEN

A THIN CURTAIN of misty clouds obscured Her Lunar Majesty, the moon, last evening . . . making the Moonlight Cruise and Carnival which benefited the New England Hospital for Women and Children, somewhat of a misnomer . . .

But, in spite of her absence, a sort of mild, enjoyable lunacy pervaded the spirits of the merrymakers who boarded the S. S. Town of Hull at Rowes Wharf . . . bound for an hilarious evening on the various amusement contraptions at Paragon Park . . .

MRS. WALLACE L. PIERCE

The last course of dinner always seems more tempting when the diner has to hurry away to catch a train or boat . . . and many of the moonlight cruisers lingered longer than they intended over their dessert and coffee . . . for there was a grand bustle of cars and hurrying late-comers at the wharf before the gangplank was run in and the Town of Hull steamed out into the harbor . . .

In spite of the fact that the boat sailed 15 or 20 minutes after schedule, many of the delayed voyagers arrived in time to get a distant view of her stern which was connected to the dock by nothing but a fragile, gradually diminishing wake . . . the members of several pre-cruise dinner parties took a last look at the disappearing vessel and piled into three taxi-cabs to drive to Nantasket over the road . . .

In contrast to these disappointed sailors was the foursome consisting of Leslie Enstis, Jimmie Madden, Bugsy Stone and Stacey Holmes, who packed up a picnic supper and served it on the top deck, a good while before sailing . . . and by the time they had devoured the last stuffed egg they were ready to form a sort of welcome committee to those coming aboard . . .

Most of the sailors and sailorettes were of an appropriately nautical turn of mind on the trip down and stayed out on deck gazing at the activities in the harbor and watching expectantly for the moon . . . Some of the old salts, however, like the Morgan Harrises, Sis Hovey, Frannie McElwain and Jean Tuckerman, who ordinarily do their sailing in their own craft, danced away the hour in the salon where Sammy and his musical tars held forth . . .

Gay Parade From Ship to Park

THE PARADE FROM SHIP TO PARK had the natives on tip-toe trying to gaze at each individual face in the throng . . . Led by a stirring military band the marchers swung along arm in arm, in rows of six or eight, singing at the top of their lungs the old favorite, "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" . . . In the front row, singing as loudly as any of the rest were Mrs. Charles Milton, Harriet Aycock, Dick Sprague, George Lauriat and Eleanor Park . . .

Once inside the park it was every man for himself . . . in the rush to use up the long strips of tickets which entitled each cruiser to a free ride on everything inside the place . . . Number one on the ticket strip was the Giant Coaster . . . but this was quickly passed over by all but the most venturesome . . . Quite a few of the girls who accompanied young men of the venturesome type had a diplomatic problem on their hands . . . one look at the coaster cars rocketing down from the highest point in the structure nullified all their escorts' persuasive arguments . . .

As one might expect, the merry-go-round with its docile wooden gee-gees, was one of the most popular spots in the park for the horse lovers in the crowd . . . Bill Chamberlain, who is treasurer of the Eastern Horse Club and the Paddock Club, got a great kick out of giving the attendant a couple of tickets for him and his wife . . . Ted Skinner, Olivia Peters, Charlotte Cosby, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaw, the Wallie Pierces and Dodo Dean all performed tricks on the wooden horses that they wished they could do on a real live animal . . . such as standing in the saddle, reaching down to the floor and picking up objects . . . and lots of other more unorthodox and original feats . . .

Young Folk Make Merry

OVER IN HILARITY HALL the big slide on which one sits and slides from the rafters down into a little bowl-like hole in the floor, was the center of attraction . . . Sue Carl made this breathtaking descent two or three times, with seeming disregard of what might have happened to her nice red tweed suit . . . Betsy Tower seemed to get a kick out of this whirlwind slide also . . .

Dottie Pierce, Mary Morison, Phil Tucker and James Baker did the rounds together, while Vi Amory and Bill Loomis were hand in hand on the cakewalk affair . . . Eleanor Little and Bob Burnett, Dottie MacAusland, Nicholas Satterlee, Malcolm Hayward and Carolyn Pierce succumbed to each and every attraction on the list . . . The eerie ride on the red mill was tame after the roller coaster, but a sure place to find any one you wanted to meet . . . Saw Charlie Vallendar and Evie Weatherby go through with Janet Cryan and her fiance . . . also Frannie Seaver, Mary Pentecost with Jackson Turner, Connie Turner with a crowd, Marion Leeson, the Larrie Loumbards, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Vogel, Molly and Sue Ayer and Ginny Phelan in the throng.

Boston Evening American Photo

HILARITY HALL was next on the program after Benjamin Dillingham and Jean Tuckerman climbed out of The Whip where they had a rough and tumble ride last evening at the society party at Paragon Park. From their jubilant expressions it is quite evident that they thoroughly enjoyed the bumps and thrills of riding in this little car. Mr. Dillingham is a student at Harvard and Miss Tuckerman the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Willard Tuckerman of Boston and Cohasset.

Miss Ives Weds in Salem

At a quiet ceremony held in her parents' home in Salem, Miss Margaret Goodhue Ives became the bride of James Franklin Davenport, Jr., of Pasadena, Cal., this afternoon.

The bride wore a princess gown of ivory satin, with a long tulle veil falling from a cap of duchess lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss Mary Ives, who was her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Lewellyn Howland, Jr., of Marblehead and Miss Dorothy B. Austin of Dedham, were costumed alike in dresses of two shades of blue organza, with braided wreaths of the same two colors in their hair, and carried bouquets of yellow gerbera and larkspur.

Robert Milliken of North Dighton was Mr. Davenport's best man and the ushers were David Ives of Salem, brother of the bride; Francis V. Crane of Needham, and William Lawton Brayton of New York.

Miss Ives, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar J. Ives, of 365 Essex street, Salem, made her debut in the 1928-29 season and is a member of the Junior League. She attended Concord Academy and Miss May's School.

Mr. Davenport, the son of Mrs. James F. Davenport of Pasadena and Fall River, graduated with the class of 1925 from Harvard where he was a member of the Engineering Society and the Speakers' Club. He is now a member of the Harvard Club of Southern California and the Valley Hunt Club.

Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Perley Crosby of Arlington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Grace Crosby, to Dr. William Boyd Curtis, Jr., son of Dr. William B. Curtis of New York, and the late Mrs. Curtis.

Miss Crosby is a student at the Cambridge Nursing School. Dr. Curtis is a graduate of Columbia University and of the Medical School at Columbia. No date has been set for the wedding.

Commencement Program at Emmanuel

Sharing the limelight with Regis is Emmanuel College whose 14th annual commencement is scheduled for Thursday afternoon. Dinners, buffet suppers and luncheons are jammed into an already full schedule for the 86 seniors.

"Little Women," to be given by the senior members of the dramatic society Saturday afternoon at the college auditorium, opens the program. A dinner at the Hotel Westminster, at which the alumnae will be hostesses, is the highlight of Saturday evening's plan.

Leading roles will be taken by Helen Delaney of Cambridge, Mary Dunn of Dorchester, Claire Busby of Watertown, and Martha Buckley of Needham.

May 30 will be Baccalaureate Sunday with Rev. Francis X. Sallaway, S. T. D., member of the faculty, delivering the address. College orchestra and club will figure on Tuesday's program, both rendering musical selections at the annual concert.

Scheduled for Wednesday are class day exercises with the seniors garbed in white marching beneath rose hoops held by members of their sister class. Daniel Sargent of Harvard University will be speaker at the commencement Thursday afternoon.

A novel note is being introduced into the senior prom plans. Instead of the customary white frock the girls will wear either black or white. Isabelle Maguire of Somerville is chairman of the prom, assisted by Anna Murphy of Worcester, Elizabeth Bolton of Forest Hills, Louise McAuliffe of Foxboro, Catherine Herlihy of Jamaica Plain and Margaret Logue of West Roxbury.

Alice Quartz of Newton, president of the class, is assisting with plans for the grand finale of the week to be held at the Copley-Plaza. Other seniors on the committee are Marjorie Nyhan of Newton, Eleanor Dewire of Somerville and Helen McCarthy of Brookline.

Entertaining at dinner on Tuesday evening, following the annual concert, is Mary Sullivan of Jamaica Plain. Among her guests will be Ellen Dorsey of Milton, whose engagement to Billy Whelton was recently announced. Regina Diane of Brookline, Martha Buckley of Needham, Mary Dunn of Dorchester and Margaret Brooks of Somerville.

Before journeying on the senior prom at the Copley-Plaza, Martha Buckley of Needham is giving a supper at her home. Also feting her classmates is Mary Cushing of Worcester, who is entertaining at a tea. Pouring at the affair is a trio of her classmates, Margaret Logue of West Roxbury, Alice Quartz of Newton and Eleanor O'Brien of Newton.

Regis Seniors Prepare For Gay Week

Coveted sheepskins for Regis College seniors will be awarded a week from Friday at the annual Degree Day at the college in Weston. But before the arrival of the memorable day, a hectic round of affairs will keep the class of 1937 busy.

Virginia Cunningham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Cunningham of Waltham, is overseer of the entire week. She entertained her aides at a tea yesterday at her home. Pouring were Helen Ryan of Springfield, president of the class, and Pauline Cunningham of Providence, who is sailing on June 25 on the Scythia for a three-month sojourn abroad.

Taking time off from their shopping whirl to attend yesterday's party were Betty Donovan of Brookline, Ruth Heywood of Fall River, Edith Levin of Nantucket and Mary Calbeck of St. Johnsbury Vt.

GUESTS AT TEA

Other guests were members of the class who are serving on the committee for senior week. Among them were Doris Lebel, Eileen Sullivan, Ann Cox, Alice Torphy, Esther McDonald, Phyllis O'Brien, Doris Stevens and Betty Donovan, publicity chairman of the week.

Members of the decorations committee, guests at yesterday's tea, were Alma Mulligan, Alice McConville, Mary O'Connor and Madelaine Dwyer. Others were Rita McArdle, Katherine O'Brien, Feieciene O'Keefe and Anna Connors, who are planning the refreshments for the week's activities.

Sunday's baccalaureate opens the festivities. A presentation of Shakespeare's "Winter Tales" will [illegible] the same evening at the college by talented members of the senior class. Tuesday's program will be devoted to alumnae activities. College babies will be on show in the afternoon and will be followed by a reunion and dinner for all the old grads at the college.

COLORFUL EVENTS

Most colorful events of the week are scheduled for Wednesday afternoon and evening. Class prophecy and history will be read at class day exercises in the afternoon. Hoop-rolling, sporting events of all kinds will amuse the seniors in the evening. At the same time the college choral group will serenade the seniors.

Japanese lanterns and a stringed orchestra will provide the romantic setting for the senior spread on the campus Thursday evening. Dancing in the foyer that evening climaxes the day. Following the awarding of degrees on Friday, all roads will lead to the Fox and Hounds where the annual senior dance will be staged.

Regis Senior

Anne Cox of New Bedford, senior at Regis, figures prominently in plans for the commencement week which starts Sunday. She is serving on the committee and is taking part in the drama "A Winter's Tale" to be given Sunday evening in the auditorium.

Plays Hostess

Washington, May 27 (USA)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, joint-hostess with the cabinet ladies in entertaining the senatorial wives, provided not only the setting, but the coffee and six hams. The affair was a picnic lunch on the south lawn of the White House and each of the hostesses contributed some item of food to the spread.

Post-Honeymoon Clothes Very Colorful

MISS MARY MORISON MRS. WALTER F. WYETH

Clothes for the big once-in-a-lifetime moment are still as bright and devastating as ever, but not to be overlooked by the discerning trousseau searcher are those saucy little kitchen frocks for post honeymoon days. In the interest of efficiency as well as sentiment, the Fashion Congress of America yesterday showed a unique collection of brides' kitchen and house frocks at their bi-weekly fashion show in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Not exactly designed for the kitchen but certainly appropriate for early morning marketing on a bright June day is the cool, white frock modeled (left) by Miss Mary Morison. At her right is Mrs. Walter F. Wyeth one of the fashion jurors.

Kitchen Styles Popular

Fashion Congress Favors Gayest Frocks

It's time into the kitchen [illegible] this spring!

When the honeymoon is over [illegible] first da[illegible] home [illegible] was the theme of the fashion show [illegible] by the Fashion Congress in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel yesterday.

Smart, little kitchen frocks pretty enough to intrigue any critical young husband, and practical enough in which to bake the first bridal cake or wield a shining skillet won, placed and showed at the unique style review.

Bright with color, too, were these post-honeymoon togs with color combinations so striking that many of them could [illegible] right out of the kitchen [illegible] golf [illegible] or the beach.

Mrs. Melvin E. Johnson, Jr., the former Virginia Ross, was chairman of the young [illegible] society prominent fashion jury. The following women [illegible] choosing [illegible] frocks [illegible] bride and bride-to-be:

Mrs. Harris [illegible] Nelson, Miss Alice Burrage, Mrs. M[illegible], Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. Lang [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Proctor, Mrs. H. M. [illegible] Miss Lily Warren, M[illegible] Fenno, Jr., and Mrs. Walter F. Wyeth.

In contrast to the informal type of kitchen frocks were several costumes for daylight dining. These were in the new [illegible] manner, wide-skirted and very sheer and just the thing for [illegible] afternoon hours in [illegible] of the Ritz.

Mannequins who [illegible] kitchen [illegible] Miss M[illegible] Louise Ranney, Miss [illegible] McNe[illegible] [illegible] Miss Sally Scudder.

SPANISH TRUCE IDEA DROPPED

London, May 27 (AP)—A British [illegible] for an armistice in Spain was virtually abandoned today.

[illegible] was made along with plans for a simple plea to both [illegible] in the Spanish civil conflict to humanize the war. This [illegible] first place on the agenda of the European non-intervention committee.

[illegible] to permit the [illegible] of all foreign fighters in [illegible] had been suggested by the British.

BOY, 14, SAILOR HANG SELVES

Death by hanging today had claimed the lives of [illegible] boy and a man, residents of Marlboro and Boston.

In Marlboro the body of Edward Hickson, 14, [illegible] was found hanging from a [illegible] in a barn.

G. H. Johns[illegible] man ended his life [illegible] at Savannah, Ga.

The Hickson boy had been living for the past nine years with Mr. and Mrs. John O. Forbes. His body was found in the barn adjacent to the Forbes home and Medical Examiner Irving F. Armstrong gave the decision that the youth had committed suicide.

Seaman Johnson used his shirt as a noose in the jail cell. The man had been booked by Savannah police on drunk charges.

Night High School Graduation Fete

Graduation exercises of the Central Evening High School will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the English High School building, Montgomery street, South End.

Henry J. Smith, school committee member, will address the graduates and present diplomas to 111 men and women. At the end of the present term 2,800 certificates were awarded to students.

The Central Evening High School which was in session since last Sept. 28, is the only evening school in the city to offer both commercial and academic courses. Joseph F. Gould is director of the evening and summer schools in the city.

Commons, Salary Up, Cheers Baldwin

London, May 27 (AP)—The House of Commons cheered retiring Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today when he announced that the government would boost members' salaries by $1000 annually.

They now receive 400 pounds, about $2000, and will be paid 600 pounds.

15 Vacation Days Abroad For Winners

"The 1937 Paris International Exposition will be a show of modern life.

"There has never been another like it in the world."

These were the words recently spoken by a member of the French [illegible] committee [illegible]

And a trip to the exposition this summer is being offered the readers of the Boston Evening American in a new and simple contest.

Here is what awaits two lucky prize winners:

SIMPLE CONTEST

For all that is required is that you write an essay of not more than 250 words on "What Paris Means to Me."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures are collaborating with the Boston Evening American as a result of marvelous response shown by New England movie goers for the M-G-M film epic, "Captains Courageous." This masterpiece from Kipling's story of the Gloucester fishermen, is being shown twice daily at the Colonial theater.

Here are the other rules, mostly concerning eligibility. Read them carefully.

1—All contestants must be residents of New England or students attending colleges or schools of New England.

2—Contestants must be 18 years old or over.

JUNE 22 DEADLINE

3—If a selected winner is under 21 years of age, his or her parents or guardian must give written consent before the winner can take the trip.

4—All essays must be submitted NOT LATER THAN JUNE 22, 1937. They should be addressed to the Paris Essay Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

5—The decisions by an impartial board of judges will be final. No essays will be returned.

Hollywood | FILMS -- PLAYS -- MUSIC | Boston

Incognito in the Back Bay area today is the suave and handsome Cary Grant, movie star, spotted by an eagle-eyed fan . . . Cary was ambling into a drive-it-yourself garage on Huntington avenue, pumped the hand of the fan and said something sly about "here today, gone tomorrow", but nary a word on what he intended to do with a hired buggy in Boston . . . In the movie vein is the announcement that two Harvard sophomores have been invited by M-G-M to sniff the warm breezes of Hawaii for the summer under contract wraps . . . The boys are Brooks Montgomery and Donald G. MacNeill . . . They loafed around the Hollywood sets last summer and seemed to acquire nothing but a golden-brown complexion . . . But one of those directors who-never-forgets-a-photograph kept them in mind and today he wired the invitation . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

Soft Note:

Things Seen and Heard:

The proprietor of a certain Back Bay night club tells the story . . . Every night for a week the same two gents visited the establishment . . . at the end of the evening one would leave very much the worse for alcohol . . . the other sober as a tee-totaller . . . the management was puzzled unto the point of inquiry . . . to learn it was all a game of chance . . . and all depended upon the bartender . . . Would he or wouldn't he reach the rim of the glass as he poured the nectar out of the shaker . . . Bets were in order . . . the winn-ah to get both drinks . . . and for six nights in a row, chance, fate or what-have-you favored the same guy . . . or maybe he knew the bartender . . .

Fish Stories:

Curator William O'Brien of South Boston Aquarium, who has just learned that rare fish commute between New York and Chicago in a streamlined fishbowl on wheels, is concentrating on securing a New Deal in transportation for Boston's Social Register fish . . . Their Garbo temperaments, he believes, rate them better traveling accommodations than the tin barrels they're now condemned to . . . Grim drama of the week at the aquarium was the demise of Little Chief, a mild-mannered seal that recently walked out on a Paragon Park seal act . . . Later, she was snared, locked up in a tank with rowdy seals, Freida, Fannie and Flora . . . Their ravenous appetite and total indifference to her artistic back-flips are said to have broken Little Chief's heart and to have eventually caused her death.

Not Breaking Bread Any More:

"Brother Rat" Run Near End

Sorry, but "Brother Rat," George Abbott's unusually successful comedy hit, ends its long engagement at the Plymouth Saturday night on account of West Coast bookings.

There remain but two more performances, today and Saturday, with the usual evening performances throughout the remainder of the week. Following Saturday night's final performance the company will entrain on a 3200-mile cross-country jaunt to Seattle, Wash., where they will open an engagement on June 7, subsequently moving on to San Francisco, Los Angeles and other western cities.

New Singing Star Found By MGM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 27 (US)—Figuring that George Murphy will be a singing-dancing-romancing sensation after "Broadway Melody of 1938" is released, MGM has decided to rush him into a dramatic role, thus giving him a chance to establish his versatility.

He goes immediately into "The Umbrella Man," a mystery opus in [illegible] plays a London newspaper reporter with a flair for finding out who dunnit. Production starts in about 10 days with William Thiele, European director recently signed by Metro, at the helm.

CHAPTER 19

"I don't know what she owes the butcher over on the avenue, and heaven only knows what she says when she goes to the bank to talk about the house. Well—I'm not going to worry about it—I've got worries enough of my own."

Edward knew a lot about the worries, but he didn't say anything.

Marie knew something about them, too.

Little by little Bee had unbent, told the younger girl of the things she was up against.

She had formed the habit of [illegible] sleeping [illegible] Edward was out and [illegible] Then [illegible] on the [illegible] light [illegible] Marie [illegible]

[illegible] asked questions [illegible]

"Mom thinks it's an uncertain life for a woman. Oh, no—she wouldn't have opposed it—she offered to help me, but I'm not quite the type, I guess. I guess I haven't much ambition—"

"I have" [illegible] "More than is good for me. Eddie has, too. That's the trouble with both of us, he says. We aim too high. Do you think I could get in pictures?"

[illegible] her curled, [illegible] face, [illegible] profile to Marie—"My features are good. They really are, don't you think? And my skin—and I could easily lighten my hair a little—Marie, tell me HONESTLY—do you think I'm pretty?"

"I've always thought so. I thought so from the first minute I saw you—though you didn't like me much then, did you? But I kept looking at you, because you were lovely—like Edward—and neither of you look the least like the rest of the family! You must be fairy children!"

"No, we don't look like Mom, or Pop, either," Bee agreed [illegible]. "And of course you understand how upset I was that first day—"

"Oh—I don't mind any more!"

"I know. But things are pretty hard, in the office and all, and when two people have been going together as long as Ritchie and I have—oh well!—"

"Bee, can't you and Ritchie get married? We did! And if we did—"

"No, it can't be done."

But night after night she'd come back to talk about it again, to go over and over the same thing, to talk about Ritchie and their affair, to hint at things that her lips wouldn't say.

And night after night she and Ritchie sat out in the parked car, in the shelter of the old overhanging oak that shaded the driveway to the garage. Sometimes, but seldom, they came into the house, after everyone else had gone to bed.

Waking sometimes, Marie heard them talking. The low murmur of their whispered words, vaguely frightened her. She didn't know why.

IN LOVE

Edward was quick to say what he thought about it all.

"She'll get burnt some day — playing with fire. And then will Mom holler her head off! Whereas, if she'd open one eye, and see what's going on now—"

"Oh, Edward! Don't say such things! They're in love!"

"That's it. It's dangerous, being in love."

He sounded so old and blase that she laughed aloud. "Oh, honey! Was it so long ago that we were parking on the loneliest place on the coast? In love, too—"

"Yes, I know. But you took an awful chance."

"EDWARD!"

"You did. Any girl does."

"But, Edward, how can you SAY such a thing!"

"Oh, I married you. But they're not all so old-fashioned and foolhardy. Ritchie isn't for one."

"Edward—you don't mean—you're sorry!"

He laughed at her, kissed her, made such a fuss over her that she had to laugh in spite of herself.

"Do I look sorry? Am I the kind of guy that does things he doesn't want to? Are you the first girl I ever saw?"

"N—no—"

"And did Charlie get out the shotgun?"

She laughed again, but Edward's own laugh died away.

"Maybe I ought to get one for Ritchie," he said. "Lord knows, Pop never will."

All her life Marie had dreamed of romance. All this last year she had dreamed of some day marrying Edward.

And now the dream had come true.

Had it come too fast? Was it because their romance had been so swift, that now realization semed unworthy of the dream? Or was it just because of material things—his family, the house, their dependence?

When she was with Edward, when they were together, she was really happy. Then love was enough. Then the cares, the worries, the silly upsets of the day were blotted out. Nothing mattered except that they were together.

She could not cease to wonder at her great good luck, the fulfillment of the most impossible, the most romantic dream a girl ever had.

Why, they might have gone on as pen-pals forever, without ever meeting. Edward might have met someone else. He might have married. He might have just stopped writing.

It never occurred to her that she might have married someone else, might have had some other end. It seemed that Edward was her future, no other was possible.

But though she could not question the beauty, the completeness, the absolute desirability of her lot, she could not always restrain her impatience, her tears, her overpowering homesickness.

If she could just have had Edward—and had other things different!

How could they be really happy here? How could she find a life for herself, in her mother-in-law's house? Edward went out every day looking for work. Until he got it, it would be impossible to move, and even then, how could they, with the Wilsons looking forward to their board, and Bee hinting that if Edward assumed his full share of the burden, she could be happy too?

Every time she looked at the new ice-box she was frightened and angry. It was true that Mrs. Wilson had counted on Edward's board to pay for it, and it was true that two weeks had rolled by since he paid the one and only $10.

But what right had his mother to go and spend it that way? If she had any sense they'd know that young peoplewant to be alone!

CASUAL COTTONS are so much fun this season that it wouldn't be hard to let them run away with the vacation budget. But don't let them, else you'll find yourself truly "without a thing to put on" when there's tea for the visiting author on the country club porch, or a big white yacht drops anchor in the harbor and a special invitation for you comes in via mahogany tender. Then you should have something like this eye-taking outfit that combines a delectable Wedgwood blue crepe frock with a dubonnet linen jigger coat. Its accent is a burnt straw crownless hat and natural linen shoes. Miss Virginia Phelan models this Fashion Congress selection, which is moderately priced. "Your Figure, Madame!"

STUDY YOUR FIGURE —NOT YOUR FACE

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1937, King Features Synd., Inc.

"CLOTHES make the figure," says Milo Anderson, designer for the beauties of screendom. If you have ever longed for expert advice on the clothes for your type, the suggestions of this famous designer will be the answer to your wish.

Anderson's maxims are worth remembering, and the next time an overly-enthusiastic saleswoman says, "Madame looks lovely," ask yourself whether the dress conforms to your requirements for line and style.

To distract attention from your bad points, the designer would have you accent your good ones. For example, don't buy a dress with the idea of hiding a too large bust. Rather, play up the hemline, the waist, or the neck. Lingerie touches for this type have been overdone.

Most women with this figure difficulty buy dresses that are too snug in the armholes. Special attention should be given to the size and cut of the armhole. Sleeve lengths also play an important part. A short sleeve that stops at the largest part of the bust exaggerates this measurement. It is better to wear sleeves that are three-quarter length, or long.

A wide belt accentuates the size of both bust and waist. Thin belts are slimming. If you tend to thickness about the waist, never wear anything shiny there to catch the eye. Mr. Anderson likes the slightly raised waistline for the petite girl and the tall, slim girl, and the natural waistline for the large figure. "Now that skirts are short," he says, "let's stay away from the long waistline."

Hips present an individual problem. "In almost every case," says Mr. Anderson, "give me a straight skirt. With a small waist, however, a flowing skirt may be worn to hide the hips. Tunics of the right length, are flattering to every figure."

Large legs appear to best advantage in skirts that are straight and not too full. If your legs are too thin or too fat, you should disregard fashion's new shades in hose and wear the color which most closely matches the skirt. Also, it is well to keep away from trick shoes. Mr. Anderson advises the girl with too thin legs never to wear very sheer hose, and to favor skirts that are pleated or soft or fluffy about the hemline.

As to dress materials. The large woman should choose light-absorbing materials rather than those with a shiny surface. "Prints are dangerous to fat and thin alike," Mr. Anderson says. "For, with prints you do not see beyond the charm of the flowers and forget to watch the silhouette." Mr. Anderson considers ample curves easier to camouflage than angles, and likes figures on the curved order particularly with the more romantic

In conclusion—when you go in to buy a dress, don't start studying your face in the mirror! Study the lines of the dress.

Smoked Shoulder Recipes

By MARTHA LEE

WHAT are your plans for the Holiday week-end? Are you serving "brunch" to a group of friends on Sunday or Monday?

Or is the big picnic basket coming out of the cupboard to be packed with a lunch for appetites created by a day in the fresh country air?

Whatever your plans, we must eat. But the home-maker wants to enjoy the holiday along with the rest of the family and friends.

Whether you are planning a dinner, week-end party, midnight snack or picnic, no better choice of food could be made than to purchase a smoked shoulder.

The smoked shoulder is easily prepared and can be utilized so many different ways that will fit into the scheme of things.

Whether you are serving this smoked shoulder hot or cold, may we suggest that you use the recipe given you before for baking in milk, unless a more spicy flavor is desired.

We think the mild cure of these tender smoked shoulders, which come in the red and white checked wrapper, averaging 5½ pounds, give a most desirable flavor, and they require no soaking.

We are offering suggestions for the use of shoulder in dishes which are sure to fit in with any of your week-end plans.

TASTY SHOULDER SANDWICH FILLING

Put two parts of cooked shoulder to one part of raw onion through meat grinder and moisten with mayonnaise or salad dressing.

SHOULDER SANDWICH FILLING

- 1 cup ground cooked shoulder
- ½ cup ground walnuts
- ¼ cup chopped stuffed olives
- Mayonnaise to make paste

Mix all together and serve to the "non-onion league."

Here's a picnic suggestion that gives more ease of preparation. Pack the whole baked shoulder in the lunch kit and slice it on the spot. Take along softened butter and sliced bread and let everyone make their own sandwiches. Crisp salad makings and salad dressing carried separately will add zest to the meal. Top this off with some fresh fruit and cookies or a cake of the variety that can be easily transported. Cucumbers chilled in a mountain stream make a welcome alternating sandwich to accompany the baked shoulder.

SAVORY SHOULDER SALAD

- 1½ cups diced apples
- ½ cup diced celery
- 1 cup chopped cooked shoulder
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard

Mix apples, celery and ham, and add the mayonnaise seasoned with prepared mustard. Serve on lettuce.

COMPANY ROAST SHOULDER

Place shoulder in hot oven (500 deg. F.) for 20 minutes, then reduce heat to 400 degrees and pour over it two cups of orange juice. Bake 22 minutes to the pound. Remove skin, rub with orange marmalade and bread crumbs mixed with well beaten egg. Cover with slices of boiled oranges dipped in melted butter and sugar—fasten on with cloves. Place a maraschino cherry in the center of each slice. Return to oven for browning.

Fashion Flashes

USUALLY rich and formal silks are being shown for summer wear not only for evening gowns, but for the huge, enveloping wraps necessary to cover satisfactorily the billowing skirts of the new gowns.

Satin as a coating is decidedly new. Molyneux used stiff slipper satin for his dramatic evening wrap shirred from a circular back yoke and the adaptations of this important wrap are being done in the same fabric. On day coats for spring [illegible] uses supple satin combined with wool, with a wide diagonal [illegible] section of the satin.

* * *

DUCHESS satin is being used for evening gowns and [illegible] suits. Soft drapable fabric is also being suggested for the "lampshade" silhouette endorsed by Molyneux. One of the [illegible] has an enormous hoops [illegible] of satin caught up in soft folds like tufting.

* * *

THE ribbed silks continue to be important for summer for both day and evening. Grosgrain in the stiff silk-and-cotton 18-inch width is used for voluminous evening wraps and capes. Supple grosgrain in wider widths makes tailored daytime dresses, suits and coats. Pleated grosgrain ribbon is an important trimming for the dressier daytime coats which have entered the fashion picture.

* * *

MILLINERY designers are beginning to ask for taffeta for early fall hats and California wear. New versions of Schiaparelli's schoolgirl bowin millinery are being made in taffeta and satin. Satin makes bandanas for hats of the funnel type inspired by Schiaparelli.

New Party Games

HIGH adventure for your next party! This match-box race will leave your guests doubled over with laughter, gasping for more games as hilarious as this.

Line up your guests in two teams. Give the leader of each line the outer casing of a small safety match box to put on the end of his nose.

At your signal the box passes from nose to nose, down the line and back again. No one must touch the box with his hands. The team that first gets the box safely back to the leader wins.

Before you introduce another of these exciting team games, you [illegible] "Off and On." Send [illegible] the room while the crowd decides which article of clothing or jewelry he must take off and [illegible] some other part of his person. The crowd guides him in guessing what he's to do by humming a popular tune softly and quickly when he's on the right track or warm [illegible] and softly when [illegible].

For instance you want Hal to take off his tie and [illegible] around his left ear. When Hal touches his shoe your humming is barely audible. You speed up as he touches the hat. When he reaches for [illegible] your ardent humming [illegible] what to take off.

WEDDING DETAILS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to be married [illegible] and I would like complete information with regard to the formation of the procession and [illegible]. Please give me all the details that you think I should have, as I really don't know a thing about planning a wedding.

BRIDE-TO-BE

In the well planned, cosmopolitan wedding of today there are certain definite regulations that are maintained. These basic [illegible] for the well planned wedding are [illegible] whether the wedding is formal or informal, elaborate or simple, a church wedding or a house wedding, a large wedding or a small one.

Many of these rules have to do with the processional and the recessional. Here are some of the [illegible].

First, in the [illegible] wedding of today, the bride is [illegible] with the ushers in either the processional or the recessional. In both the processional and the recessional the ushers walk together, two by two, and the bridesmaids walk together two by two. The maid of honor or the matron of honor walks alone [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the shortest [illegible] It is best to have an even number of bridesmaids, two, four, six, eight, [illegible] and an even number of ushers. But it is not necessary to have the same number of bridesmaids and ushers.

Usually there is only one "honor" attendant, the maid of honor, who walks alone. If there are two maids of honor, they walk together. Sometimes the bride wishes to have both a maid of honor and a matron of honor. If this is her plan, these attendants usually walk alone, [illegible]

[illegible]

If there is a flower girl she usually walks before [illegible] and a ring bearer [illegible]. If there are two flower girls they walk together. If there are pages [illegible]

Following is the order of the procession:

1. [illegible]
2. [illegible]
3. [illegible]
4. Bride with her father.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Five-Day Hollywood Diet

Lose 15 Pounds Safely, Easily

POSED BY ASTRID ALLWYN

By ARLINE GOULD

FOR years we've been searching the highways and byways of our land for a reducing diet that would take off weight without necessitating the agonies of starvation.

There are too many good reasons for avoiding stringent diets and the inevitable pangs of hunger which follow, for us to mention them all here. Suffice to say, that their effectiveness (if any), is lost in a succession of deadly ills.

From Hollywood, where the figure-controlling problem has always been a serious factor, comes a new five-day reducing diet.

It not only enables one to lose weight rapidly and safely, but guards the health of the beauty-seeker at the same time. It's the newest fad and probably the most sensible one that has trickled ... city of make believe in a long, long time.

The backbone of this affair is lamb chops and steaks (with an occasional portion of fish thrown in) and the nicest thing about it is that one never seems to get hungry ... even with no indulgent lapses.

Five days is the time limit. At the end of that period you return to a normal course of eating (no candy, rich desserts or chocolate sundaes, of course) for two days. Then back to the five-day affair. You will then yourself be the best judge as to whether you should continue the diet further.

A friend from Prattleboro, Vt., tells ... that she lost 17 pounds in exactly a month ... felt any discomfort or hunger.

Unless your fat is of the extra heavy and hard-to-get-rid-of variety, you probably won't find it necessary to continue the diet for more than 10 days ...

Start ... new Hollywood reducing regime. Not only are you going to look a whole lot better with fat and bulges gone, but your mental outlook will be brighter, too. Avoirdupois has a lot to do with lowering one's morale, especially when summer and the bathing suit season comes around.

To obtain this new five-day Hollywood diet, merely write to Arline Gould, Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Married Comrades

Parents Learn Cause for Junior's Odd Behavior

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 314

"OH! No! No!"

There was consternation in Junior's voice as his father told him that when he returned to the camp he would be wanting to tell Roderick and Betty about the things he had seen on the trip.

But I wondered if I were mistaken in thinking that beside the consternation there was a feeling—subconscious, probably, of gratification at his father's decision.

"Oh," said Dickie, adding with what I knew was purposeful misunderstanding, "that's right! Betty's probably been up here several times. She would want to play guide."

"But she hasn't," Junior said quickly. "She's never seen any of these things, and she's crazy about them."

Before Junior had learned that Roderick's final punishment for his escapade with the car was to be deprived of this trip to the White Mountains, he, with Roderick and Betty, evidently had been discussing the possibilities of the trip and Betty, in all probability, had expressed desire to be told all about them when the boys should return.

HONORABLE BOY

I was sure that the temptation to "get even" with Roderick for the trick the other boy had played in planning to have Betty ... share his exile had been strong with Junior for a few minutes following the revelation of Roderick's deception.

I was intensely proud of my boy for the way in which he had conquered his resentment, and assured Roderick against the other's apparently sincere protests that the original pact would be kept. But I guessed that he was as relieved as I was at Dicky's command that he go through with the sight-seeing expedition.

This latest dictum of Dicky's that he must tell Roderick and Betty about the trip was also gratifying to me, for my sense of justice told me that Roderick deserved this extra bit of punishment. I had ... at the camp ... as the final ... to the closing of accounts in the car episode.

By planning that Betty Gibbs should share his exile, he had made the stay-at-home proposition preferable to the mountain trip. I was very willing that he should savor the chagrin resultant from Junior's ability to chant the praises of the things he had seen.

But I knew that Dicky had not yet finished his outline for Junior's conduct upon his return to camp and was very sure that he would tell the boy something which would enable him to "save face" upon his apparent breaking of his pact with Roderick after solemnly engaging in it.

"If Betty hasn't seen any of these things," he said, "there's all the more reason you should tell of your experiences today. But I wonder if you mind my telling a joke on you?"

"What?" Junior faltered.

"Why, I think they would all laugh heartily if I told them how you didn't want to go to these places, made all sorts of silly excuses, and that finally I simply had to command you to go to see them. Do you mind my telling them that?"

Congress Checks Blank Checks

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Congress refuses to issue blank checks for the White House. No more carte blanch.

The petty cash is fifteen hundred million smackers to be spent in spelling bees for deserving skywriters.

This will see us through this depression and half-way through the next one.

Mr. Roosevelt wants to spend that money all by himself. The trouble with the Constitution is the preamble starts out plural and winds up singular.

Unpunished Crime

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Some of the worst mistakes conceivable go unpunished at the bridge table.

In today's hand, the fantastic discarding of a defender created the opportunity for declarer to make two overtricks on a vulnerable doubled contract.

North dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North: ♠ A J 10 9 2; ♡ 10 7; ♢ 9 4; ♣ K Q 9 3

West: ♠ K Q 4; ♡ 6 5 2; ♢ A Q 10 8 3 2; ♣ 8

East: ♠ 8 5 3; ♡ A Q J 9 4; ♢ 6 5; ♣ 7 4 2

South: ♠ 7 6; ♡ K 8 3; ♢ K J 7; ♣ A J 10 6 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	2 ♢
Pass	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 N T	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

North's opening bid was pretty light but not really bad. He attempted to warn South of this lightness by passing over the two diamonds and over two notrump by making the weak response of three clubs. But South, with a very fair hand could not be denied and persisted to game.

The fourth-best diamond was the opening lead (The Queen was the proper opening on the bidding). Dummy's nine held the trick, and five rounds of clubs were rattled off. On the second and third rounds West discarded hearts. On the fourth round he let go a low diamond, and carefully noted East's discard of the heart nine.

A SERIOUS ERROR

Now ... partner had hearts stopped. West made the horrible play of ... his last heart on declarer's fifth club. East ... echo, and at ... did some profound thinking.

He had, of course, noted East's high heart signal, but he had also seen West discard three hearts. One thing was inconceivable and that was that West, after receiving a heart signal from partner, would have ... ed the ... Obviously ... communication with partner's hand. Since that was ... ably ... concluded that West must have ... down to the Ace of hearts while East had merely been showing ... of the Queen ...

On this ... finesse ... with a smile expectantly for the Ace to go up from West. To his utter amazement and disgust West showed out, discarding a spade. East won ... the heart Ace, and led a diamond through the declarer's King-Jack.

Progress in Detection of Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Few of us really appreciate what marked progress has been made in the detection of disease.

When I first started to practice medicine many of the ailments now well understood were difficult to recognize. Too often they were discovered when it was too late to effect a cure.

Although the X-ray was first discovered in 1895 its general use as a means of recognizing tuberculosis dates back only to 1916. Since then tremendous strides have been made in the perfection of the X-ray apparatus.

Now it has become an instrument of value in finding certain forms of tuberculosis which might have been otherwise overlooked.

Tuberculosis may be present and yet cause few symptoms. Dependable signs of the disease may not exist. The sufferer does not realize he is harboring the germs of a serious disease.

Certainly he does not know he has an ailment that is a menace to others as well as himself. But if an X-ray picture is taken of the chest the disease may be immediately recognized.

The X-ray is capable of penetrating substances that ordinarily shut out all chance of inspection. In tuberculosis there are certain ... substances which cast shadows on the photographic film. When such shadows appear on the plate it is usually because of some disease in the lung.

The diagnosis of tuberculosis of the lungs is made by the appearance and location of such shadows. By means of the X-ray it is possible to detect the earliest form of tuberculosis.

CARBON IN A MOTOR IS LIKE TONSILS IN YOUR THROAT

MILLIONS of people have never had their tonsils removed, yet tonsils continue to cause sickness and dangerous infection. Thousands of motorists have never had the hard carbon removed from their cars.

But the carbon is there—causing loss of compression, loss of power, waste of gasoline and oil, rapid depreciation, costly repairs.

WHY PUT UP WITH IT, WHEN THERE IS NO NEED?

℞ You can't dissolve the carbon in your motor—nothing can, without dissolving the metal at the same time. But you can destroy the effects of hard carbon by using Hy-Power or Aero Solvenized gas which harmlessly but effectively dissolves the gum—the carbon binder—and so allows the loosened carbon to blow out the exhaust.

Hy-Power and Aero are the only gasolines in New England which have the Solvenized process—the accepted scientific method of producing a gasoline that combats hard carbon. And this U. S. Patented Solvenized process also adds a pure lubricant to the gasoline which protects metal from burning or scoring.

JENNEY Solvenized Gasolines free the motor of hard harmful carbon, improve compression, and increase power and save gas and oil. If you want the most miles per gallon—the most for your money—and a safe motor at the same time—you will use New England's popular and most scientifically made gasoline —JENNEY Hy-Power and Aero Solvenized.

THIS IS LIFE

BY

Robert E. Rogers

Once again it is shown clearly that the will on the offensive is far more effective than the will on the defensive, the active stronger than the passive will. Those legislative acts to which everything in the past four years has led, and which only the other day were ratified by the Supreme Court, seem to mark the triumphant culmination of the President's policies which obviously have been more directed toward reform than recovery.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The Court's support of this security legislation was obviously unequal. Old age assistance was deemed necessary even by some of the strict constructionist die-hards. There seems to be no doubt about that. But the Unemployment Insurance clause barely scraped through by the skin of its teeth, the old 5 to 4 vote. Once again some one, presumably Mr. Justice Roberts, holds the balance and validates the law in the teeth of very considerable opposition and dubiety about its wisdom.

Obedience to Avert Change in Jurisprudence?

No one can tell how far the President's direct attack tending to show that the "nine old men" are too old and, besides, out of step with public opinion, has broken down any sense of certainty and infallibility the nine members of the Supreme Court may have possessed in the past. Presumably no one will know, at least for a very long time, how far this swing in the Court's opinion towards the New Deal has been prompted by the feeling that unless a majority knuckled down to a determined chief executive the whole set-up of the Court would be irretrievably and permanently changed. It is also not impossible that the President's words actually have produced in them a conviction of sin and so caused the shift.

It remains clear that the New Deal's convictions upon the "general welfare" clauses in the Constitution have prevailed and the United States has entered upon a period, which probably will be lasting, of a markedly new fashion of interpreting the Constitution. The results may well be salutary.

New Laws Are Still Far From Perfection

The fact that these laws have been declared constitutional does not mean by any means that they are perfect or even workable in their present form. They share with the NRA and the AAA legislation the stigma of haste, of incompleteness, of empiricism and dogmatic theory. To the citizens in general they are equally not clear and not understood, but are full of contradictions and sins of both commission and omission. They will have to be tinkered with for a long time to come. The President admits that.

They are by no means free of the President's besetting and habitual sin of improvisation. That proved almost fatal for the NRA and the AAA. An executive of less self confidence and determination might have dropped the subject. But no, the NRA in another form is obviously going to be revived and another AAA will follow in due course.

To drive these measures through successfully has been the President's unresting determination. To make sure that these shall be validated is the purpose behind the whole tchu-bohu about the Supreme Court.

States Seem to Lose Half of Sovereignty

The President has learned a good deal from his defeats. For one thing he has learned that his measures must be drawn more carefully than in the past, with more regard for constitutional limitations.

He has learned the necessity for more flexibility, less minute and bothersome detail in administration of his ukases.

But he has by no means been side-tracked in his determination for a near-totalitarian state.

The lesson of all this lies in two words used in someone's opinion or dissent. I forget whose. The words are "quasi-sovereign".

Gone are the "sovereign states" of ancient American tradition. Henceforth the states are to be "quasi-sovereign"—whatever that means. It is my opinion that it does not mean very much.

TWO Roosevelts Up IN AIR

ONE ALONE, ONE WITH FIANCEE

At almost the same time, a second Roosevelt was also sky-hopping at the Boston airport.

He was Daniel Roosevelt, Jr., a cousin of Franklin D., Jr.

Daniel, a Harvard freshman, was making his first solo flight as a student pilot, after six weeks of instruction by Douglas Macpherson of Intercity Airlines' training staff. Said Daniel:

"Flying as a sport has no equal, but I have a practical purpose, too, in getting my pilot's license. I plan some day to own a ship and use it regularly as a means of travel. You can't beat a plane when you want to get somewhere in a hurry."

Chief of du Pont Clan To Miss Roosevelt Bridal

New York, May 27 (AP)—There'll be a days reapproachment around the banquet board down in Delaware June 30 when the du Ponts and Roosevelt gather for the wedding of Ethel du Pont and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

The President will be there with his family, and most of the du Ponts with theirs.

For the political writers and the Washington observers—even though they won't be there—there's one disappointing note. The leader of the du Pont clan won't be on hand to greet the President.

Pierre S. du Pont, the titular leader of the family, chairman of the board of E. I. du Pont de Nemours, and one of the organizers with John J. Raskob and Alfred E. Smith of the American Liberty League, will be in France.

Mr. and Mrs. du Pont sail on the Queen Mary, June 23, a week before the wedding. They will visit Mrs. du Pont's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Belin. The Belin's son, Pierre, was one of the passengers who escaped in the Hindenburg disaster.

The elderly Wilmington industrialist, a cousin of the father of young Roosevelt's fiancee, was asked if he would be at "Owl's Nest," the estate of Miss du Pont's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont, to greet the President.

"I'm sorry, but I won't be there," du Pont replied. "I would like to attend and had planned on it.

"But Mrs. Du Pont and I had made our arrangements to go to Europe last January. At that time, we picked a sailing date later in June because we understood the wedding would be earlier in the month.

"I certainly don't want our absence to be misunderstood," he added.

"After all, it's the youngsters that are getting married and it's their future. Whatever differences the old folks might have don't amount to anything on such a day."

Harvard Gives 22 Scholarships

Twenty-two scholarships, totaling $9675, have been awarded at the Harvard Graduate School of Engineering for the next academic year, it was announced today.

Massachusetts winners on the list include Charles D. Gates of Ashburnham, Charles T. Morrow of Gloucester, George E. Phil of Brockton and Lester Tarmopf of Cambridge.

Charles D. Brown of North Vassalboro, Me., was also awarded a scholarship.

Hi-Jack Suspect Seized in Battle

Arrested after a battle in a cab or a speeding truck, a 21-year-old Jamaica Plain man faced Roxbury court arraignment today as an alleged jockey.

Police said he attempted to steal a $20,000 cargo of silk stockings but took the truck to some driving off with part of a load of men's clothing, valued at $5000.

Capture of the accused man was by Patrolman Michael J. Caney of Roxbury Crossing station.

He leaped from a cruising car to the latter's board of the stolen truck, as both vehicles roared at high speed through Lenwood street, Roxbury.

Dockage Charges To Be Arbitrated

A campaign to keep down the mounting costs of dockage charges in Boston harbor will be submitted to arbitration at the State House it was decided during a protest hearing at the Chamber of Commerce.

The protest, sponsored by the Maritime Association, charges the port of Boston will lose considerable business if the Mystic Terminal Company carries through a plan to levy a cost of 10 cents a ton on cargo handled at the company pier.

Off for his first solo hop as a student pilot is Daniel Roosevelt of Dedham, a Harvard freshman and a cousin of the White House Roosevelts. He has been taking a training course at Boston airport, planning eventually to own a plane and use it for regular travel.

BOLT Fells Lynn OFFICER

FAMILIES FLEE LIGHTNING

Lightning today felled a Lynn policeman, drove two Dorchester families to the street and caused other havoc in various sections of Greater Boston.

While patrolling Western avenue near Washington street, Lynn, Patrolman Thomas J. Neal was stunned by a falling highly-charged electric wire. He narrowly escaped electrocution.

O'Neal 25 of Archer street, Lynn was treated for a cut across his nose, and then returned to work.

Pending repairs, the telephone company switched police calls to a garage a mile away from the station. Outside the garage a radio car transmitted all messages to the station.

A bolt of lightning struck a ventilator pipe at 30 Brendan street, Dorchester, rocking the house and causing the families of William Birmingham, on the second floor and Emmanuel De Costa, on the first floor to rush to the street.

Forty feet of the flag pole at the World War Memorial Park, East Boston, was knocked off by the lightning bolt. The rest of the pole was split.

Lightning struck two homes in Framingham on Andrew and Beaver streets. Slight damage was reported.

Bolt Wrecks Home In R. I., Man Shaken

Wickford, R. I., May 27 (AP)—Lightning struck the home of John Cook at Cedar Tree Point before dawn today, tearing a hole in the wall, shattering windows, ripping off clapboards and shaking Cook severely.

The same bolt broke a few windows, but did not other damage, in two houses several hundred yards distant.

Picks Longer Jail Term to Avoid Concord Stay

Because he doesn't like the "atmosphere" at Concord Reformatory, a prisoner in Suffolk superior court today asked to be sent to state prison where he will have to spend 16 more months in confinement than at Concord.

Larry Annelo, 28, of Barton street, West End, found guilty with Charles Riley, 26 of North Russell street, West End, on charges of carrying a weapon and assault with intent to rob, was at first sentenced along with Riley, to an indefinite term in Concord Reformatory.

With good behavior a prisoner on indefinite term could be released from that penal institution after 2 months.

Upon the plea of Annelo's counsel Attorney William R. Scharton, that his client "preferred" state prison to Concord, Judge Joseph L. Hurley retracted the Concord sentence and sentenced Annelo to the lowest term in state prison, two and one-half to five years.

Annelo and Riley were arrested by Special Officers Joseph Hart, Daniel Donovan and Andrew J. Mullin after they allegedly held up a card game on Cutting street, West End and Riley struck James Mason, of 80 Rutland street, over the head with a gun.

Both prisoners will go on trial next week as two of five men charged with attacking a girl two months ago on Willard street.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY

Marjorie McBride

City dwellers seldom see a horse, save when the mounted police turn out to lead a parade, but horseshoe pitching has more followers in the big towns of the East than it ever did. A statistician says there are 3,000,000 addicts in the country. Boston has its share.

MARJORIE McBRIDE

Still played in backyards, for the most part, the game has progressed to courts on the public playgrounds and in the public parks. William Mullen, recreation director for the Boston Park Department, says there are 300 courts on the playgrounds and in the parks . . . an increase of 100 this year. He estimates several thousand men and boys play every day. There are sectional championships and all that, just as in tennis. In September, the grand tournament for the city will be held in South Boston Stadium or in Franklin Park.

Horseshoe pitching is one of the oldest amusements in America. It retains its ancient standing from the days it originated in front of village blacksmith shops.

Since it became a court game, and has come to the parks, generally accepted rules have been laid down. These rules are rigorously enforced in the tournaments. A tournament game is one of 50 points. A ringer, right over the stake counts for three. The shoe must encircle the stake so that a rule can touch both calks without touching the stake.

If there are no ringers, the shoe closest to the stake counts for one, provided it is within six inches of the pin. Ringers by opponents cancel each other.

Pitching-Shoe Businesses Thrive

The horseshoe used is not the sort the pioneers used to play with, and old Dobbin would scorn it. It is larger, flatter and smoother. A couple of firms do a thriving business in manufacture of shoes for pitching.

A shipment of 100 electric reading machines for the sightless have arrived in Boston. They are provided by the American Foundation for the Blind, and are in charge of William B. Mowry, director of Division of Education for the Blind, 110 Tremont street.

Constituting the Talking Book, the machines are really books translated into sound. There are more than 100 titles, ranging from Shakespeare to "Journey's End." The records are on both sides, going in for 30 minutes, and there are about 15 double-sided records to tell the story of a novel in the author's own words.

Moderns whose works have been reproduced for the sightless often read part of their own stories on to the records . . . notably Arthur Wentworth, Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars and William Beebe.

They learn, for instance, that braised pork chop charcutiere is a chop served with a sharp brown sauce, containing chopped pickles. They even get a chance to taste it so they can advise the customers.

AUSTEN LAKE

Credit Where Credit Is Due: Something About The Irish Greyhound

LAST MONTH WHILE MOTORING TOWARD Fermoy on the roads of County Waterford, Ireland, I came across a marble, roadside monument to a dog named Master McGrath.

AUSTEN LAKE

It was a splendid bit of bas-relief sculpture, erected 70 years ago and obviously that of a greyhound. So I wrote a little item of casual wonder and sent it back to this journal, where it was printed.

Today I received a mildly admonishing letter from Mrs. Thelma T. Huhn of Hingham, president of the Irish Wolfhound Association, reading, "If you had time to investigate the kennel club records of Master McGrath—providing he is registered—you would find that Master McGrath was not a greyhound but an Irish wolfhound, largest and noblest dog bred by man.

"As for the Irish six-pence, any Irishman will tell you that the hound portrayed on the coin is the dog that has figured in Irish history since before the days of St. Patrick—the Irish wolfhound. I believe in giving credit where credit is due and so feel obliged to make this correction."

So, now to correct the correcter and give credit where it is due.

The Ty Cobb of Coursing

SINCE VIEWING THE ROADSIDE MEMORIAL I have run across the trail of Master McGrath in various parts of Ireland.

There is a portrait of him owned by the Royal Dublin Society, from which the effigy on the six-pence was modelled. In Ireland, where greyhound racing is an actual industry and the cost of training dogs is enormous, Master McGrath is to coursing [illegible] Ty Cobb is to baseball and John L. Sullivan to early [illegible].

The dog's history, in brief, is this: Bred in 1865 by a County Waterford kennel owner, he was reckoned too puny to keep. So his owner tied him in a weighted sack and tossed him in a stream. A ne'er-do-well poacher was hiding in the bushes and salvaged the sack, helping to resuscitate the dog and taking him home to his cabin.

For a year the poacher used the puppy to course rabbits for the family's food. Until, finally, the animal attained a local reputation for speed and cunning, so that its original owner and breeder nominated him for the Waterloo Cup, supreme symbol of coursing championship.

This cup, incidentally, was founded by the Waterloo Hotel of Liverpool in 1836 and still stands as the superlative trophy in greyhound coursing, comparable with the Earl of Derby's bowl on the British turf.

* * *

Wolfhound Rare Curiosity

MASTER McGRATH WON THE WATERLOO CUP in 1868, 1869 and 1871 and died a few years later full of honors and [illegible] only a dog could be in a country where racing beasts were [illegible] in oil and marble.

[illegible] as recently as 1927 that the mechanical rabbit was [illegible] from America to the Free State. Irish greyhounds were trained to race from starting boxes around a turf oval.

The sport has grown rapidly, under rigid supervision of the Irish Kennel Club and without any State supervision, until today there are greyhound tracks at Cork, Dublin, Limerick, Waterford, Galway and Athlone, to mention only a few.

Not that I wish to disillusion Mrs. Huhn, but Irish wolfhounds are a rare sight in Ireland today and bred only as patrician curiosities from the remnant of a race which was nearly extinct until a few fanciers revived the breed.

Though I did not see a single Irish wolfhound in 32 days of circulating around the Free State, I did see thousands of greyhounds, ranging from sleek, blooded broods on the more prosperous farms, to the unkempt mongrel strains on poorer holdings. Because, in Ireland the greyhound has a definite value aside from his market price or sport winnings.

The country abounds in rabbits, bunnies that bounce from the [illegible] as you motor along and spray over the fields, cunning little enemies of the farmer and a serious scourge to his crops. So [illegible] of growing greens the farmer turns his kennels of greyhounds loose and the dogs revel in a welter of springtime excitement.

* * *

The World Imports Them

So, where the wolfhound is ornamental—there being no wolves in Ireland and only a few state-protected stags, the greyhound is utilitarian.

Thus, in 1914 the Irish Kennel club reported 5443 greyhounds registered in Ireland, while today there are more than 20,000 on its books, whole armies of which are exported to America, England, France and Russia.

In fact Russia, intent on reviving capitalistic horse and dog racing, sent a commission to Ireland last year to buy 150 horses and 500 greyhounds for breeding in the Ukraine.

Nor is there the jealousy there which exists between hound and horse men in this country. Paddy Parkinson, son of Ireland's leading horse breeder on the Curragh of Kildare, keeps his kennels adjoining the stables of his father and trains his hounds over the same grassy, limestone acres.

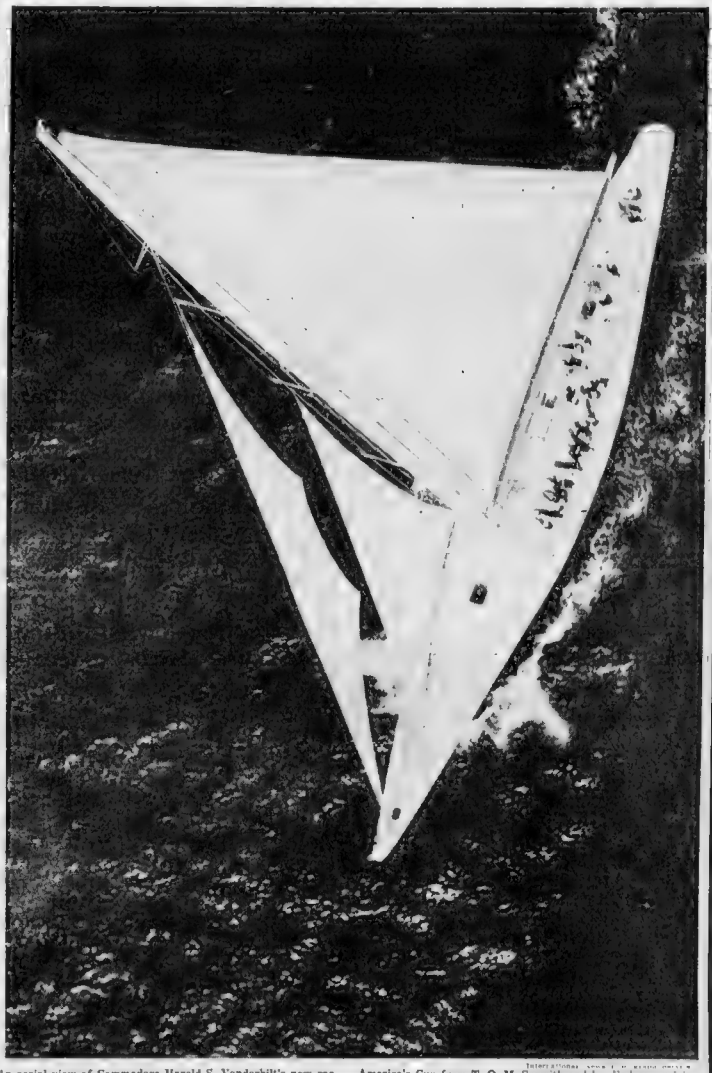
On the April morning that I was there his father's grooms led out choicely horses on the lush, green plain, for which he pays $25 per head annually to the government for grazing and training privileges.

At the same time young Parkinson's handlers brought out teams of greyhounds on leashes and took them off to the coursing grounds. And only a week before, he said, he had sold a hound named Pete MacCroon to a buyer from London's White City track for $900.

In Ireland there are two other breeds of dogs beside the greyhound which are characteristically common—the sheep dog with its uncanny intelligence for disciplining the flocks as they browse among the heather or move along the roads, and the Kerry Blues, which go in pairs.

In fact I have never seen this curious, slate gray, woolly beast—and they are affectionately prized among the farmers of Dingle, without seeing his twin nearby. When one dies the other has been known to expire out of sheer sympathy.

Looking Down on the Ranger Under Sail



An aerial view of Commodore Harold S. Vanderbilt's new racing sloop Ranger, taken off Newport, R. I. The Ranger will try to duplicate the feat of Vanderbilt's Rainbow, which defended America's Cup from T. O. M. Sopwith and his Endeavour I in 1931. Against the dark blue waters of the Atlantic, the Ranger makes a pretty scene as she cuts the water in a trial spin.

Hope Running High for Recovery

By BILL CORUM

New York, May 26—They tell me the best gues[s] is that Mickey Cochrane, fiery, fighting, likable manager of the Detroit Tigers, will pull through in his battle against the fractured skull he is suffering at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, the Bronx. But that even if he does, he never will play again.

[illegible] nerves have been in such state that such an accident in his case was a probability. An athlete dependent on reflexes to protect him from injury, and the reflexes of a fellow with frayed nerves are not dependable. Cochrane's were not.

MANAGERS To Pick ALL-STAR TEAM

Washington, May 27 (INS)—Upsetting the practice of former years of allowing the fans to pick the all-star teams to compete in the annual diamond classic here July 7, big league officials decided today the teams will be selected by managers of both leagues.

The decision was reached at a conference of Kensay Mountain Landis, baseball "czar," Will Harridge and Ford Frick, presidents, respectively, of the American and National Leagues, and Clark Griffith, president of the Washington baseball club.

"What the public wants in an all-star game is not a mere exhibition or a parade of all-star teams," Landis said. "It wants the full strength of both leagues pitted against each other in a real contest."

By BILL GRIMES

For more than a decade, it has been habitual for the younger generations participating in Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts state championships to curtsey to the veterans and retire apologetically.

For years, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., Mrs. W. M. Austin, Mrs. E. C. Stone, Mrs. D. M. Belcher, Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., Mrs. W. G. Dow, Mrs. R. M. Gardiner, Ruth Batchelder and Mrs. H. F. Prunaret, Jr., have dominated the quarter finals of state championships.

But of late the young [illegible] has become [illegible] from 30 years of age.

In other words it seems that the youngsters [illegible] up on the old [illegible] they have been doing [illegible] have complete [illegible] of the situation in the semifinals.

FINALIST 10 YEARS AGO

Ruth Batchelder and Mrs. Henry F. Prunaret, Jr., are the veterans of the first and second round survivors.

For more than a decade Miss Batchelder has been fighting to break through to victory in a state championship.

She was a finalist at Wood[illegible] but lost to Mrs. Ro[illegible] Jr. [illegible] years ago which was her most serious bid.

Mrs. Prunaret broke in in 1929. Four years later she reached the finals at Charles River only to toss away the title to Mrs. John Grew, who was awarded a 1 up victory.

Although she is now in the early twenties, Mrs. Warren Beard the defending champion, was only 16 years old when she played in her first state championship at Salem Country Club in 1930.

She has established a remarkable record for [illegible] along with winning the title she has been a semifinalist three times and reached the quarter finals in 1932.

Deborah Verry, Tatnuck, went through Mrs. John Grew, Mrs. W. M. Austin and Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., to reach the finals at Brae Burn two years ago, only to fall before Rosamond Vahey.

MISS PARSON GAMESTER

The remaining four quarter finalists have failed to register in state championship play. Laura Robbins, Weston and Virginia Bascom, Worcester have perfect records as to qualifying. They have made three bids to reach match play and have been successful on all occasions.

They started as Brae Burn in '35 and were first round victims. They repeated a year ago at Salem, where Miss Robbins was beaten 6 and 5 by Mrs. Russell Swett whom she took into camp yesterday and Miss Bascom dropped a 4 and 2 match to Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr.

Mrs. John Ames, Jr., Thorny Lea and Frances Parson, Weston, are engaging in their first Bay State championship. Mrs. Ames as Miss Isabel's Henry played with the Philadelphia Inter-City team and in the women's Easterns three years ago, but Miss Parson is new to championship competition.

Miss Parson is playing Mrs. Beard today. She eliminated Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr. 2 up in the opening round and then put out Margaret Curtis 1 up.

VIRGINIA COMES THROUGH

During her two matches at The Country Club, Miss Parson has shown remarkable competitive spirit. She was six up at one time in her match with Mrs. Eaton but had only a one hole advantage standing on the 18th tee.

Under such conditions, a less courageous player would have cracked, but not Miss Parson, who pulled herself together and took the last hole.

Again, Miss Parson was on even terms at the home hole with Miss Curtis. Her third shot was just off the back of the green, but she chipped down stony and then in a most nonchalant manner walked down and holed her putt to win the match.

Little Virginia Bascom is another real competitor, one who might well carry off the title. She has as many shots as, and more punch in her strokes than, anyone in the field.

YANKS Pick Up STEAM

WILL WIN BY 29 GAMES

By Associated Press

It seems the American League was only fooling after all.

For a while there, the junior circuit looked as though it was going to steal the National League's stuff and put on a race as close [illegible]

But the untimely and [illegible] to Mickey Cochrane [illegible] by the New York Yankees [illegible] derers now make it appear that things are pointing toward somewhat of a repetition of last summer's waltz for Gehrig and company.

Certainly Detroit's pennant possibilities, as good as any team's a week ago, have come close to being as washed up as the week's laundry since Cochrane stopped that accidental bean ball of Bump Hadley's two days ago.

OVER SLUMP

And now, with the Yankees definitely over their worst slump in two years, and widening their American League lead daily in recent days the rest of the circuit probably will have to call out the National Guard to stop the swat squad from repeating the [illegible]

Just as suddenly as they landed in their slump at the start of the season, after a shocking spring exhibition trip, the Yanks have snapped out of it in the past week. They now boast a winning streak of six straight, which they stretched to that size yesterday in blanking the Cochraness Tigers, 7-0.

In their last six games, which mark the beginning of their return to belting power, they have banged out 81 hits for 50 runs. At the same time, their own "Big Five" flingers have allowed less than two runs per game to the opposition.

Lefty Gomez [illegible] plied the whitewash brush yesterday, as George Selkirk socked his eighth homer. The victory boosted the Yanks' American League lead to three full games, and dropped the Tigers to fourth place.

INDIANS RALLY

Cleveland's Indians rallied with a four-run spree in the ninth to top the mystifying Philadelphia Athletics, 8-6, a victory which shot the Tribe from fourth to second and lowered the A's to third. Featuring the battle were pinch homers by Bruce Campbell and Billy Sullivan.

On a western rampage New York's Giants [illegible] Al [illegible] innings to beat the Reds, 6-3, and pull up to a game and a half off the National League pace set by the Pittsburgh Pirates, whose tilt with the Dodgers was rained out. The Cardinals held onto third place with a 6-4 win over the Boston Bees on the strength of Johnny Mize's three-run homer in the ninth.

The White Sox rallied for three runs in the ninth and nosed out the Senators 6-5. The Boston Red Sox finished on top, 11-9, in a knock-down, drag-out brawl with the Browns.

Mat Results

Worcester—Dan O'Mahony, 230, Ireland, and Tor Johnson, Sweden, wrestled to 90-minute draw. George Clark, 226, Scotland, and John Malmberg, 230, Worcester, wrestled to 30-minute draw.

Los Angeles—Vincent Lopez, 235, Los Angeles, defeated Hardy Kruskamp, 215, Ohio (two straight).

Araho Stable's Mucho Gusto, winner of the Pilgrim Handicap, Suffolk's opening day feature, has been assigned top impost of 124 pounds for the Decoration Day Handicap, the $5000 added feature . . . Johnny Barba is now a full-fledged rider. The Italian lad from Brooklyn completed his first day as a veteran rider on the midweek card . . . Lyman Brusie denies Guy Fawkes has been sold to T. P. Morgan, Texas oil tycoon. Guy Fawkes will continue to sport the silks of A. C. Norris, New York sportsman . . . Joe Gillen, assistant superintendent of the Pimlico race track, will stay for a week.

* * *

J. J. Powers brought two horses here from Narragansett, Orphan Lass and Joan F. . . . Suffolk Downs stewards have issued 58 jockey licenses . . . Bob Scully is handling Johnny Barba as well as Apprentice Johnny Jackle . . . Adolph Pons, master of the Country Life Farms in Belair, Md., has reserved a box for himself and several friends . . . Tom Healy, trainer for C. V. Whitney, [illegible]

* * *

Lou Smith, Rockingham general manager, tells Suffolk horsemen that stake nominations close June 1 at the New Hampshire plant . . . Tommy May accepted his first mount of the session when he was astride Long Bit Tuesday . . . Sam Simon, popular concessionaire, has his own set of figures on the gee gees and does right well, thank you.

* * *

Bruce Wetmore, Suffolk's treasurer, is a busy man. Wetmore is one of the bulwarks of the Eastern Racing Association and, along with President C. F. Adams, controls the majority stock . . . E. J. Pritchard, trainer for Mrs. J. C. Richardson, checked in with five head of horses, which include the useful plater Prince Pompey . . . Trina, Danny Sullivan's game-hearted little filly, will be a tough one to down in the Aleppo feature today.

CASEY Here Today for DAVIS BOUT

[illegible] Casey [illegible] Irish heavyweight, accepted Wee Willie Davis, rough and 305-pound Virginian, as an opponent in one of three headline bouts at Boston Garden tomorrow night after other top matmen refused to meet him.

"Steve doesn't fear anybody—he proved that to me when I made up this card," Promoter Paul Bowser said.

"I offered Davis as an opponent to no fewer than half a dozen topnotch wrestlers, and not one would have any part of Wee Willie.

"When I offered him to Casey, the latter informed me he would wrestle Wee Willie or any other heavyweight in the world."

Casey and his manager, Jack Albright, were expected in town today. The Crusher has been touring Pennsylvania [illegible] New York [illegible]

The third bout of the triple windup will see Dan O'Mahony, former champion, trying to carry on his brilliant comeback. He is paired with Jack Marshall, who returned from a triumphant tour of Texas and the South. The latter, a Coloradoan, believes his [illegible]

Quist Expected To Play Saturday

New York, May 27—Adrian Quist, [illegible] team which meets the U. S. on the week-end, was expected to work out this afternoon after being shelved several days with an attack of intestinal "flu."

He has been in bed most of the time and under a doctor's care [illegible]

Gill, Zaitz Lone Eagles In I. C. 4-A

[illegible] College will send only [illegible] I. C. 4 A. meet in New York this week-end, but this pair of Eagle stars are expected to garner the best part of 10 points between them.

Zaitz, co-holder of the indoor I. C. 4 A. crown [illegible] exclusive holder of the N. A. A. U. indoor and outdoor crowns, the New England intercollegiate championship record and the the N. E. A. A. A. U. crown and record, will be favored to take the shotputting top honors.

Gill who did 48 seconds for the quarter in setting a new record while [illegible] his second successive N. E. intercollegiate 440 title last Saturday, will not be favored to take his specialty in Manhattan, but he is a cinch to be up among the leaders.

[illegible] Johnny Woodruff, Pittsburgh sophomore flash, is the favorite to take both the 440 and the 880 but the Pitt star will have to get down close to 47 seconds to [illegible] the East Boston red head.

Both Gill and Zaitz have been invited to the National Collegiates to be held at Berkeley, Cal., on June [illegible] way back from the west coast they will take a crack [illegible] N. A. A. U. outdoor championships [illegible] Milwaukee.

Tech Track Stars Leave For I. C. 4-A

Captain Henry Guerke of the Beavers is the mainstay of the team, and the current New England two-mile crown holder seems fit to annex the title in the coming games.

THROW 'EM AND DUCK

MRS. COCHRANE HOPES

Mr Cochrane's condition is slightly improved," said the latest bulletin issued by Dr Robert I Walsh New York Yankee's physician in charge of the case. "Signs of cerebral concussion have diminished. The possibility of infections and secondary meningitis is still present."

"I think he's going to get over it," she observed. Dr Walsh and Dr Byron Stookey, a brain specialist, apparently were in agreement with her on that point.

HOSPITAL

"I answered 'yes,'" she explained. "He asked 'Very bad?' I answered 'no.'"

Hard-Bitten Vets in Tears As They Visit Cochrane

By BOB CONSIDINE

New York, May 27 (INS).—Fighting for his life with the grim doggedness that made him a great baseball player, Mickey Cochrane, catcher and manager of the Detroit Tigers, was still near death in St. Elizabeth's Hospital today.

"Mr. Cochrane's condition is slightly improved. Signs of cerebral concussion have diminished. Possibility of infection and secondary meningitis is still present."

He was struck in the right temple by a ball pitched by Bump Hadley of the New York Yankees [illegible]

WIFE AT BEDSIDE

[illegible]

"I lost sight of the ball about three feet from the plate. I can't remember anything after that."

[illegible] veterans of [illegible]

"It was a 'sailer' that hit him," he said, referring to that type of pitch which deviates from its destined course without purpose.

"I don't know what made the ball sail. Maybe it had an imperfect cover. Mickey didn't seem to be able to move, when it 'took off' for his head. The time before that, when he batted, the ball acted the same way, but he stepped back and hit a home run.

"I don't have to say I'm sorry. Micked is a wonderful fellow, and the last person in the world you'd want to hurt."

NEXT 24 HOURS

Dr. Walsh, who was at the stadium when the accident occurred, was chiefly worried about the fracture [illegible] close to Cochrane's sinus. He said:

"If Cochrane can continue as he is for another 24 hours without complications setting in, I believe he will recover. The fracture unfortunately connects with one of the sinuses and the possibility of infection is there for a danger."

Mrs. Cochrane [illegible]

"He has only a black eye. There isn't as big a bump as you'd expect from such an accident. No, I never used to worry about his getting 'beaned.' I guess I never had any worries until now."

Mrs. Cochrane learned of her husband's [illegible] baseball game [illegible]

SINUS THREAT

There was no immediate indications for the need of an operation, the doctors in attendance said.

The threat of sinus infection was gravely learned by Cochrane's associates. About this time last year the doughty player [illegible] sinus infection [illegible]

Quick Step There In the Clutch | Was Pride and Joy Of Johnny Donovan

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

"Quick Step was one of the finest horses I ever trained," said Donovan. "The horse cost Bill Gallagher very little. I think Quick Step was thrown in during a deal for a lead pony.

"Quick Step became one of the most popular thoroughbreds ever to race in New England. In the early days of Rockingham Park thousands of people would visit the New Hampshire racing plant of a Sunday. Most of them wanted to see Quick Step. They must have cashed a few $2 win tickets on him.

"Bill Gallagher has plenty of money, but he has always insisted that his racing stable pay for itself. This may be one of the reasons I became so fond of Quick Step. He usually came through for me and won a purse when I needed money.

"We once went to Texas while my funds were low. We were racing at a new track, and the horsemen were wondering how their mounts would do on it.

"I needed cash, and so entered Quick Step for the first day of racing. The first time Quick Step saw the track was when he paraded out from the paddock. He got off in front and won by eight lengths.

"When Quick Step couldn't race any more, we farmed him outside of Lawrence. He is up there today, and I hope he is happy. He was a grand horse. Especially when I needed money."

[illegible]

"Horses have many fine qualities," went on Donovan. "Take old Moral, for example. He likes to work at the same hour each day, and [illegible] away at his oats and hay at the same time. When the track is muddy or a bit soft, he is liable to turn in a [illegible]."

"A real race horse," he said, "but when campaigning around the country with a lot of overhead I like to have a handy horse like Quick Step in the barn."

MRS. P. A. SHAW of Newton paid $400 for Stage [illegible] another mount owned by Mrs. Shaw, was entered [illegible]

I HAVE RECEIVED the following letter from Gov. Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire:

"There is being sent you under separate cover a complimentary hunting and fishing license for the year 1937, which it is my pleasure to present you in recognition of the interest you have taken in New Hampshire and its public undertakings.

"I am mindful that the delights of New Hampshire's great woods, lakes, ponds and streams are well known to you, and I appreciate that you are one of those friends of the state to whom much credit is due for the great increase in the number who annually enjoy its many attractions."

Thanks, Governor!

[illegible] contest of a series of [illegible]

[illegible] events will be the same [illegible] for the big wing tournament in June. These are hand-launched glider, hand-launched stick model and R. O. C. cabin models. The specifications of these will be the same as those provided in the green contest manual and all Junior Birdmen rules will be followed in the contests.

Conducting the contest will be Howard Cheney, director of [illegible] aeronautics in the Waltham schools, and Waleigh [illegible] assisted by WPA instructors of model building.

[illegible] in addition to providing attractive prizes for the winners, will serve as a rehearsal for the wing tournament and give contestants a good idea of the performance of their championship models.

All Junior Birdmen are invited to take part in the Waltham contest. There will be duplicate prizes for the high point scorers, one set for Waltham Junior Birdmen and one set for Junior Birdmen living outside of Waltham.

These prizes are: First, gold wrist watches with sweep second hands, second movie cameras, third binoculars, fourth vest pocket cameras and fifth tennis shoes. In addition Waltham runners-up will receive tickets to a Waltham motion picture theater.

Two commuting train companions on the way in this morning asked your column conductor how come WEEI went on the air last night at 11 o'clock and "flashed" news for 15 minutes without any reference to the condition of "Mickey" Cochrane, the [illegible] in such critical condition.

A third fellow walked our way because he had been listening to the WNAC news, he said. The former friends explained that they had stayed out of the bay purposely to get some last minute word of the national pastime celebrity, and couldn't understand the sin of omission.

Of course, ye scribe couldn't very well give them any answer, because he, too, had heard a satisfactory last minute bulletin from the plucky Boston boy's bedside through the WNAC waves.

Alighting at South Station, the peeved pair claimed they had been patient about the routine wire bits from Moscow in Russia, Geneva in Switzerland, Berlin in Germany and Amsterdam, in Holland, hoping for a New York item about the Detroit Tigers' injured mainspring.

Reform Proposals AT WASHINGTON HELD Too General, Vague

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 26—There is a vagueness and generality about the more recent reform proposals at Washington that is significant. Instead of codes, we get broad ideals. Then everything is to be turned over to a "board," to be appointed by the President.

Partly no doubt this is just a new technique designed to make it easier to get harmless appearing measures through Congress. Partly, however, it is the result of the impossibility of specifying definitely the means of realizing the ideals of the New Deal.

When the President writes of "a fair day's wage for a fair day's work" and "minimum standards of free labor," he refers to [illegible]. But when it comes to saying what "fair" and "free" mean in dollars and cents, who knows?

It seems to me that this new technique is likely to fail. There is no emergency apparent, unless it be in the public debt. Congress is showing an inclination to ear mark funds, and to limit executive discretion. So we are likely to find inquiries aroused and a hesitation to grant large discretionary powers.

If we will all consider two fundamental facts about such attempts to fix wages as the one now being considered, we can avoid much disappointment and waste—not to mention more serious consequences. These two facts are as follows:

(1) The value of labor is part of the value of the products which labor helps to make. Therefore, we cannot fix a "fair value" for labor without fixing "fair values" for all products, and for the productive agencies which help labor to make products.

Any change in steel wages is bound to affect either the price of steel, or the demand for labor as compared with capital goods. And any change in the price of steel or of capital goods is bound to affect the prices of other products.

All the values of what we economists call "consumer goods" (articles of consumption) and "producer goods" (all factors of production such as land, labor, capital goods and raw materials) are bound together. You cannot disturb one without disturbing all.

And if we get started on the way of trying to "stabilize" or to raise fair values, you are bound to go ahead and subject all [illegible] to government control. It is especially important for a free people to note that this means controlling their consumption as well as production.

(2) The second fundamental fact is that the fixing of minimum prices or rates usually leads to attempts to fix all prices or rates. Always the question arises: If this is a fair minimum, what is a fair differential above the fair minimum?

This is true because the minimum is fixed so high that, in order to pay it for the less productive services, the prices for the more productive services have to be reduced.

In the case of labor there will certainly be a strong tendency to fix any minimum wage at a high level. Then the following principle will come into play: the higher you fix a minimum wage, the lower you will have to make the maximum wage. The higher the pay for the less productive workers, the less there will be for paying differentials to the more productive workers.

Is this not why the American Federation and the Committee for Industrial Organization are differing? Mr. Green's union stands for a full recognition of differences in skill and training. Mr. Lewis stands for greater uniformity.

In conclusion I will add the general opinion that no fixed minimum can be justified on purely economic grounds. It must be justified on grounds of health and good citizenship. Then provision will have to be made for supporting those who cannot produce enough to earn the minimum.

ROBUST Appetite For METAL
REASSURING SIGN

By Associated Press

A robust appetite for metal was noted in business circles as a reassuring sign of vigor in the nation's industrial machine.

Latest figures on steel, copper and other industrial metals indicated consumption was holding around peak recovery levels.

Despite some curtailment of new buying, steel use was described by "The Iron Age," a trade publication, as "strongly" sustained in all important lines except the automobile industry. Preparation for new models, it was explained, [illegible] reducing production of parts for 1937 cars.

The break-up of the wave of world speculation in copper, lead and zinc a few weeks ago has been followed by revival of interest the [illegible] heavy buying of [illegible] easiness over a possible [illegible] in the price recently anchored around 14 cents a pound after a drop from 17 on the spring decline.

[illegible] in trade quarters at 346,136 tons [illegible] period last year, a gain of nearly 56 per cent. These figures are watched by copper men as the best index of "apparent consumption."

Credited with much world demand for industrial metals but regarded as an exaggerated factor by many authorities has been absorption for war machines. Jobs Near 1929 Level

Employment in March in manufacturing, agriculture, the service industries, and trade, distribution and finance combined, was higher than in 1929, according to the National Industrial Conference Board.

These industries normally afford employment for 80 per cent to 85 per cent of the total number of the country's workers. Total employment in all industries and occupations in March, 1937, was about 4 per cent under the average monthly record of 1929. It must be rememebered, however, that from 1929 to March 1937, there was an estimated increase of about 4½ million persons in the nation's total available labor force.

The greatest gain as compared with 1929 has taken place in manufacturing, amounting almost to 5.5 per cent. In agriculture, the number of workers rose a little over 1 per cent. In service industries and in trade, distribution and finance, the gain in workers amounted to 1 per cent.

A lag in employment in construction, transportation, the public utilities, and mining was responsible for the fact that employment on the whole in March was less than the 1929 average level.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, May 27—Wall Street is talking about earnings of $7 a capital (preferred) share for Great Northern Railway this year if the wheat crop comes through with flying colors.

CORRECT Timing For SUCCESS
JOHN D. MAN OF COINCIDENCE

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, May 27 (INS)—A man of coincidence.

That about sums up John D. Rockefeller, Sr., who is being laid at rest today in the family burial plot in Cleveland.

His whole life has been a matter of correct timing for accomplishing what he did.

And now, strangely, he departs [illegible]

John D. was born in time to [illegible] the period after the Civil War [illegible]

It was when capital was reaching its high tide and he rode with it, only harder, probably, than anyone else, and going farther. The times were ruthless. No business holds were barred. And Rockefeller and his associates seemed to know all of them.

Then, buccaneer business practices began to fall into disfavor [illegible] scene, although his fortune continued to pile up.

Corporate Leadership SEEN CARELESS IN ASSURING Stockholder Loyalty

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

New York, May 27—In these days when business is under fire and when all institutions are challenged to justify themselves on grounds of social utility, corporate management, it seems to me, is careless in the matter of assuring stockholder loyalty.

It used to be taken for granted that on account of the great distances in this country that it would be impractical to get more than a handful of stockholders at annual meetings. On the other hand, in little England, stockholders' meetings are widely attended, and are frequently lively affairs.

New Gold RUMORS ARE Heard

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The latest rumors concerning restriction of gold production by the principal nations of the world are being given careful attention in the financial district.

The seriousness of the problem is emphasized by the record breaking increase of the American inactive gold fund and opinion is growing that some action curbing producers is inevitable.

The Treasury's report for May 24 shows a gain of $32,300,000 in inactive gold. It is the largest single increase so far reported and lifted the total above the $700,000,000 mark. In the light of such figures it is easy to understand the serious view the Street takes of reports that Great Britain and Russia will begin conversations with this country which will pave the way for restrictions on future production.

• • •

The manner in which producers would be curbed must, presumably, wait on the projected conversations between the nations most interested in the problem. A tax could be levied on mines in the United Kingdom and in this country. But since Russian gold production is a state affair, such a suggestion will hardly be attractive to the Soviet. In fact it is hard to imagine just what sort of a proposition would interest that country. A possibility is the offering of trade concessions in return for a promise to curtail output.

• • •

All told it appears that gold has become an economic problem child. Those who share this view are as a consequence avoiding the gold shares. Some long-term investors still retain rather large commitments in the group and once again we suggest switching funds to other mediums.

• • •

In recent sessions emotions of market observers have been torn between the obvious willingness of volume to contract during declines and the inability of rails to resist even moderate pressure. As a result, most professionals are doing very little and saying even less. It is a natural development and while born of the reasons noted is accompanied by the thought that the market must, as always, prove its own case. At the same time, strike news and reports of seasonal trade contraction serve to both dampen enthusiasm and engender caution.

• • •

Insofar as developing a thesis that a base is in process of formation is concerned there is this much to be said; for a period of five weeks now prices in general have moved sidewise and in so doing have destroyed the bearish picture of technical rallies being followed by fresh declines to new low ground.

MARKET Tone FIRMER

STEELS FIRST TO RALLY

New York, May 27—A firmer tone developed in the stock market late in the forenoon today, after a generally easier first hour.

Steels, leaders in the early decline in response to the strikes called in independent companies, were the first to rally and were followed by rubbers, aviations and coppers. Most of the losses through pivotal groups were erased and the majority of stock moved above previous closing levels.

U. S. Steel opened a point lower at 97⅞, recovered half of its loss in quiet fashion, then suddenly spurted to 99⅜ for a fair-sized fractional gain. Bethlehem extended its gain to almost 2 points.

Leaders in the coppers included American Smelting, Anaconda, Kennecott and Phelps-Dodge. Oils, amusements and aviations displayed a generally firm tone. Loew's was best on a runup of about a point. Utilities were quiet after recovering from early softness.

Bonds were mixed and dull, including U. S. government issues. Grains were mixed, with corn up the limit. Cotton gained 50 cents a bale.

Financial men found further statistical evidence of trade and industrial gains over last year in the weekly report on bank clearings. In 22 cities in the week ended May 22, the total of $5,284,141,000, was up 12 per cent over the like week a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported.

Encouraging to observers of the durable goods industry were reports some steel producers have been enjoying a spurt of contra-seasonal demand within the past few days.

While a good deal of this demand was said to represent nearby needs of some consumers, it was also attributed in part to fears current strikes might choke off the normal flow of steel.

Ingot production of U. S. Steel Corporation the past week rose slightly to another new high record, 89 per cent of capacity, according to one Wall Street estimate.

Anaconda Copper Increases Dividend

New York, May 26 (AP)—Directors of Anaconda Copper Co. doubled the regular dividend on the common stock today, declaring a distribution of 50 cents a share, payable June 28 to stock of record June 27.

Previously quarterly payments have been made at the rate of 25 cents a share. Last December an extra dividend of 25 cents was paid in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement.

Comments of Brokers

Assuming that the railroads will not have to grant excessive wage increases, outlook remains favorable for many carriers despite the rather disappointing April reports, a number of which are undoubtedly better than they look—J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

A decline of the minor type, such as now appears to be taking place, could quickly reverse itself when least expected. Indications point to a development along the latter lines today.—J. E. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

The intrinsic position of railroad securities is not seriously affected, and the scale down purchase of sound railroad bonds is a logical policy.—F. H. Richardson, Southgate & Co.

Such discouragement as the rails may have engendered by their recent heaviness is offset by the fact that volume in the market as a whole has remained very restricted. Yet, there is no convincing evidence that the secondary reaction has been successfully completed.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Renewal of the rise here and new minor highs would give much support to those optimistically inclined.—G. M., P. Murphy Co.

The possibility of near future secondary reaction and formation of another base at a point lower than current levels still presents itself with enough clarity to render desirable the maintenance of a purely trading attitude for the present.—J. S. Bache & Co.

Until there is better indication of what the trade outlook will be only temporary flurries are likely to interrupt the irregular drift.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

Continued dullness on any further irregularity could be interpreted favorably and as indicating that the current action of the market represents nothing more than consolidation of its position.—E. A. Pierce & Co.

Socony Financing Likely Soon

New York, May 27 (AP)—Socony-Vacuum Oil Company expects to undertake new financing soon, John A. Brown, president, told shareholders at the annual meeting today.

He pointed out the company had been spending substantial sums for capital improvements and said it was in the best interests of shareholders to continue the program.

Earnings for the first three months Brown said, were estimated at about $12,900,000 against $87,160,000 for the comparable period last year. The gain in profits, he noted, was in common with the trend shown by most oil units. He added, however, the industry was faced with rising operation costs.

ASKS Power Plant RULING

DECISION AWAITED

Washington, May 27 (AP) — Utility interests asked the Supreme Court today to rule on the constitutionality of federal grants and loans for construction of publicly-owned power plants.

The question is one of several which President Roosevelt cited as undecided in explaining why he still wanted Congress to enact his judiciary reorganization bill.

Government counsel were expected to file a brief opposing the utilities' request late this afternoon or early tomorrow. They hastened their reply in the hope that the court will make up its mind at the regular conference Saturday and announce its decision on Tuesday—the last day of the term.

Clark Foreman, director of the PWA power division, said a denial of the request would in effect nullify injunctions against 40 municipal power projects for which more than $50,000,000 has been allotted.

The issue reached the highest court on appeal from the refusal of the United States Court of Appeals here to enjoin PWA from financing public plants in Alabama and Iowa.

The Alabama Power Co. and the Iowa City Light and Power Co. contended that creation of PWA represented unconstitutional delegation of power to the executive, that the contested grants were not justified by the general welfare clause, and that states' rights were violated.

Justice Cardozo's decisions on the Security Act were quoted in a brief by Newton D. Baker and other utility lawyers.

"While the court has upheld that expenditures to relieve unemployment are for the general welfare," they said, "it has also stated that 'the line must still be drawn between one welfare and another, between the particular and the general.'"

The lawyers argued that the court should decide "whether an expenditure for an object admittedly local and particular can become general because of possible remote or collateral effects not supported by administrative findings of fact."

If the court should grant a review, the case would be argued next fall. Meanwhile, injunctions against similar projects would stand in force.

The government will deny that PWA power grants violate the constitution. Principal reliance, however, will be placed on the lower court ruling that even if this were so, the utilities have no legal right to an injunction.

The thing which affects their interests, the lower court said, is the contemplated competition by a public plant, and that is lawful.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, May 27—April sales of household refrigerators totaled 311,769 units compared with 276,721 in April a year ago, the National Electric Manufacturers Association reported today. For the first four months sales were 1,027,640 against 796,294 in the like period of 1936.

L. A. Brown has been elected a director of Childs Co., and Alan N. Childs vice-president. Childs will continue as general operating manager.

Adams Express Co. announced it had provided a supplemental indenture for its 10-year 4¼ per cent debentures under which they are to be secured by collateral and made non-callable prior to maturity, Aug. 1, 1946. It will offer to issue these debentures in exchange for two issues of collateral trust 4 per cent bonds due in 1947 and 1948.

Installed cost of equipment sold by members of the air conditioning manufacturers association in the first four months totaled $41,311,301, an increase of 180 per cent over the sales of $14,756,992 in the same months last year, the association announced.

Melvin H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Company of Buffalo, N. Y., in a letter to stockholders, said plans to issue a part of its 100,000 shares of new no par cumulative preferred stock to retire present senior securities have been held in abeyance pending improved conditions in the investment market.

Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has advanced the price of gasoline ½ cent a gallon in northern New Jersey. The boost affects dealer tank-wagon, consumer tank-wagon, consumer tank-car prices and premium gasoline.

Shenandoah Rayon Corp. stockholders have approved a plan of recapitalization which provides for reclassification of preferred stock and changing the common from no par to par $5. Adoption of the plan will eliminate accumulated unpaid dividends on the present preferred stock. The company's plant is at Utica, N. Y.

Has Court FALLEN FOR New Deal?

By B. C. FORBES

Among themselves business men are asking whether President Roosevelt hasn't succeeded in whipping the Supreme Court into line with his New Deal policies.

They remark that every important ruling during the present session of the court has supported the administration, a very different showing from formerly.

That Justice Van Devanter will be succeeded by a nominee entirely pliant to the President's will is taken for granted. It is also taken for granted that this will virtually assure a majority of justices responsive to any Roosevelt program.

• • •

As a matter of fact, whether the "reorganization" of the Supreme Court, according to the Roosevelt formula, is carried out or not is now regarded as of secondary importance from a practical point of view. It is conceded that henceforth he is likely to experience very few rebuffs from the Supreme Court of tomorrow, a court, in the natural course of events, bound to become more and more Rooseveltian in its makeup.

This prospect is not viewed as reassuring by many men of affairs. They apprehend, they foresee, the enactment of law after law calculated to jar them and to interfere with the consolidation of prosperous economic conditions.

Different employers take different stands.

Those who are inherently optimistic declare they are determined to wrestle bravely with whatever circumstances may arise and to go ahead constructively. Others, less bold, are choosing middle-ground, hopeful that the worst is over politically, but not prepared to venture far from shore.

The third faction is undilutedly passimistic. They see America being forced farther and farther along the pathway toward dictatorship. They see the government invading private enterprise more and more; they see labor coddled, taxes increased, government credit imperilled, inflation rampant, enterprise jeopardized, not to say wrecked.

• • •

Frankly, I run across few wealthy men these days who are expanding their investments. Few are replenishing their stock portfolios which they reduced earlier in the year.

Yet, almost every business executive admits that his own company has been and is doing either modestly or pronouncedly well. Second-quarter corporation reports promise to be ahead of a year ago in most instances.

Let it be added, however, that within recent weeks a number of business men report signs of slowing-up in orders.

• • •

Sir Josiah Stamp, head of important British railroads, and whose services are often requisitioned by the British government, remarked to a gathering of business men in New York this week:

"We thrive on a balanced budget. America seems to thrive on an unbalanced budget."

"We have more people employed in Britain today than ever before in British history," was one notable statement.

Another: "Fully one half of Britain's population has been rehoused in the last 14 or 15 years," meaning that enough new homes have been built to accommodate more than half the families in Britain.

Incidentally he intimated that a new trade treaty between America and Britain might reasonably be expected within the next few months. One phrase he used: "The present madhouse of tariffs."

• • •

It is unusually difficult at this time to formulate any definite opinion as to how things will go in this country during coming months, unusually difficult to gauge whether a summer recession of some seriousness will or will not be experienced; whther securities will recover part or most or all of the ground they recently lost, or whether they will reach new heights; whether Washington activities will or will not chill enterprise for some time to come.

• • •

One reassuring statement can be made unequivocally: The majority of industrialists, financiers, banking institutions, heavyweight investors, corporation executives, etc., still retain hope that, after whatever dislocation and disturbance the New Deal may inflict upon the country, a new era of prosperity will be enjoyed—provided America is not forced too far from her historic moorings.

Diagnose Neuritis By 'Time Signals'

By G. B. LAL

(Universal Service Science Writer and Co-Winner of the Pulitzer Prize in Journalism.)

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Philadelphia, May 27—Discovery of a novel "chronaxie test," in which time signals from the human nerves are recorded, for the earliest diagnosis of neuritis, was reported here today.

Dr. F. H. Lewy, of the University of Pennsylvania hospital staff, has devised the "chronaxie measurement," especially to investigate the degeneration and inflammation of the nerves, produced by insufficiency of vitamin B.

In his technical report, made to the official organ of the American Society for Clinical Investigation, Dr. Lewy describes his method and the results of tests upon women.

Particularly important seemed the condition of expectant mothers, when their diet lacks enough vitamin B. As a result of B vitamin deficiency, under such circumstances, the future health of both the mother and the expected child are endangered.

Neuritis, in its advanced forms, is known for the pain it causes in inflamed nerves. But Dr. Lewy says that his objective was to discover the beginning of the trouble, even before any "clinical" or medically observable signs appeared.

This impelled Dr. Lewy to adapt the chronaxie method to this problem. Since L. Lapicque's work, chronaxie has been of increasing importance in physiology.

What it means, Dr. Lewy explained thus:

"Chronaxie is the measurement of the time an electrical current must pass through a tissue, in order to elicit the first muscle twitch or the first sensation."

The amount of the electrical current used was "double of the threshold value." That is, twice the strength that is required to produce the least perceptible effect.

The measured electrical current was passed in the radial nerve, that is the nerve of the forearm. This would result in the twitching of the muscle, which is recorded electricaly.

Dr. Lewy's apparatus showed just how much time elapsed between the passing of the current and the muscle response.

This reflected the condition of nerve irritability, and enabled Dr. Lewy to know whether or not the nerve was healthy or diseased.

Boys Born Tomorrow To Get High Honors

Special to Boston Evening American

Washington, May 27—All boys born on Friday, May 28, will be commissioned "Flying Cadets, Junior Grade," in the Military Order of the Firing Squad to commemorate the first observance of National Aviation Day.

The Military Order of the Firing Squad is the honorary organization of the Army and Navy Union, which, with the Junior Birdmen of America, and leading aviation officials of the nation, will celebrate the day.

Aviation Day was set aside by Congress and approved by President Roosevelt to encourage the development of aviators and air travel throughout the nation.

Handsome certificates bearing the commissions will be issued by the Army and Navy Union, with headquarters at 1314 Vermont avenue, Washington, to all boys born on May 28 between midnight and midnight.

Commander C. H. C. Baker of the union said all parents of new born boys should notify headquarters at once to receive the commissions.

Each year hereafter, the union and the military order will issue commissions to the boys born on Aviation Day to help make youth of the nation "aviation conscious."

A nation-wide radio program in which noted aviators will participate, and a banquet here attended by leading military, naval and civilian fliers and Junior Birdmen of America, will feature the celebration Friday.

Observance by schools throughout the country of Aviation Day was urged today by John W. Studebaker, federal education commissioner.

It's the wise thing to do! Rents are zooming—but your dollar still buys a remarkable value in a home. "100 Best Home Values" are offered in today's Real-Estate-for-Sale columns. See them TODAY!

Senator Robinson Able Man for Court

THE seldom-observed principle that public office should seek the man, and not the man the office, is receiving an exemplary illustration in the nation-wide and rising support for Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, to succeed Justice Willis Van Devanter as a member of the United States Supreme Court.

Justice Van Devanter's retirement under the provisions of the Sumners-McCarran Act, after 27 years of service on the bench, will become effective on June 2, in accordance with his letter to the President.

No sooner was Justice Van Devanter's decision announced than there arose—not only among Senator Robinson's colleagues in Congress, but from among the people themselves—an acclaim for the Arkansas statesman as the man who should replace the retiring justice.

This was quite unprecedented: there has been no similar occurrence in the long and noble history of the court.

THERE are, in point of fact, many cogent reasons why Senator Robinson ought to be chosen.

He has served long and well in public office, and consequently the country is back of him because the country has confidence in him.

He has been a faithful supporter of the President's progressive measures, and so the Administration itself should be for him.

He is a good lawyer and withal a distinguished citizen far beyond the borders of his own State.

Furthermore, he is a Senate leader, and the Senate, which under the Constitution has to confirm the appointment of Justice Van Devanter's successor, would hasten to ratify the appointment of Senator Robinson—probably unanimously.

IN sum, Senator Robinson DESERVES to be named; and there will be a sigh of relief from the whole people when some of the others who are being "mentioned" are NOT named.

The Parole Evil

MASSACHUSETTS will have a new Parole Board of five members, two of them women. Favorable votes in both houses of the Legislature assure that.

The question now is: Will the people benefit from the change in the manner of handling the release from prison of convicts and criminals?

This of course remains to be answered, though there exists a strong probability that more officials will mean more paroles. And that is exactly what this State does not need.

In recent years, because of the willingness of authorities to turn prisoners loose, our penal system has frequently resembled a swinging door through which men moved from one offense to another.

During 1936, 125 State Prison convicts were paroled. Within a few months 40 were back, eight of them for committing felonies.

At the Norfolk Colony 289 were freed, but in short order 52 were returned, 19 as felons.

At Concord Reformatory 506 were turned loose and 213 had to be brought back.

These statistics are available to every Senator and Representative. Consequently it would seem that entirely too much emphasis is being placed on parole officials and far TOO LITTLE emphasis on the paroles themselves.

A prison or jail sentence should mean WHAT IT SAYS. A year's sentence should not actually be one month or three months. It should be ONE YEAR.

A Boston Boy Makes Good

ANN MARSTERS, this newspaper's bright young girl reporter, writing of South Boston's Jack Haley, writes also a story of inspiration for every boy that would make good.

Jack's father, Miss Marsters tells us, was drowned when Jack was a boy. That tragedy began his career. He sold newspapers. He took the first job that came along and did it to the best of his ability, holding it until a better one appeared.

Jack wanted to be an actor, wanted that more than anything else. Singing popular songs in a Philadelphia store was a start. He sang popular songs.

There followed a rapid rise through vaudeville, through musical comedy and, finally, through the seldom-opened gates that lead to Hollywood.

Today, Jack Haley stands among the world's premier comedians. South Boston is proud of him. The profession he chose is proud of him. The nation itself is proud of him. He made good.

Often the late Arthur Brisbane wrote: "A will, plus thought, plus action. That does it." There is no better recipe for success. Ann Marsters' story of Jack Haley is proof.

A Reckless Scheme

CONGRESSMAN JOHN W. McCORMACK, supported by prominent church and civic leaders, opposes an attempt to bring 2000 Basque children from Spain to the United States.

He charges that the plan is a Communist-inspired plot to arouse sympathy for Moscow-controlled Madrid.

He points out the futility of removing little boys and girls 3000 miles when a safe haven could be found for them only a few hundred miles away, in France.

He states that although the Basques are loyal Catholics, the church has not been consulted regarding the proposed transportation.

And he adds that high churchmen see through the brazen scheme of atheists and God-haters in Spain to use innocent baby children as a smokescreen in America.

For the good of these children as well as for that of the church and country they love, the mass immigration should be stopped.

Certainly the little ones would be happier and more secure in Europe, with or near their parents, than they could ever be in this country. It is hard and cruel to separate mother and child and to use the child as a side-show or freak-show exhibit.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 27—There is one game for which Nryaa McMein, who sponsors most of the new ones, has no zest. It was thought up by her husband John Baragwanath who usually has as an ally for its perpetration Arthur Samuels. It is called quaintly, "Fun With Food."

O. O. McIntyre

And may only be played at the dinner table where such gooey viands as roast beef with brown gravy and ice cream with hot chocolate sauce are served. Sometimes a meringue-capped pudding may be employed. At any rate, the chief figure in the game must be a rather pompous person.

Baragwanath and Samuels pilot the conversation into higher levels—speaking learnedly on high flown topics. One, say Baragwanath, will in the heat of conversation allow the back of his hand to dip in the gravy and then unconsciously, talking all the while, rub his hand across his nose. His face is soon a smear.

In the meanwhile Samuels has not been idle. He appears to be absorbed in the talk and is contemplatively softly rubbing his hand over his cheeks, a hand dripping with ice cream and chocolate sauce. By this time the pompous onlooker is in a bewildering dither and Miss McMein has run shrieking from the room.

The Candid Camera Craze is getting out of bounds. The parks are filled with them sneaking up on young lovers for a tete and on young lovers for a tete and anyone of the slightest headline importance visiting a night club is fairly besieged.

I am told that many of the cameras haven't even films. Carrying them gives the inquisitive, snooping type more latitude in sticking his nose where it does not belong.

Before burlesque got its deadening biff, the front rows were sprinkled with the close-up fiends, although the management usually gave them the bum's rush when discovered.

The Candid Camerists are far more brazen than the Autograph Pest and their scavenging is usually for anything that might be turned into amusement.

Peggy Joyce's crack-up in the sledge accident at St. Moritz which cost the life of her fiance was far more serious than most people imagined. After being in a Swiss hospital many weeks she went to London and bobbed about her room on crutches for many more.

It was her first interlude in night outing in 20 years. For Peggy has during her headlined career been a gay creature of the night scene, never failing to visit from one to five clubs an evening. She has rarely turned in before dawn and has breakfasted regularly at 2 in the afternoon.

From all accounts Peggy is going to lead a cloistered life from hence. She is putting her private home on the market and is reported to have made arrangement with European dealers to sell her jewels, valued at several hundred thousand.

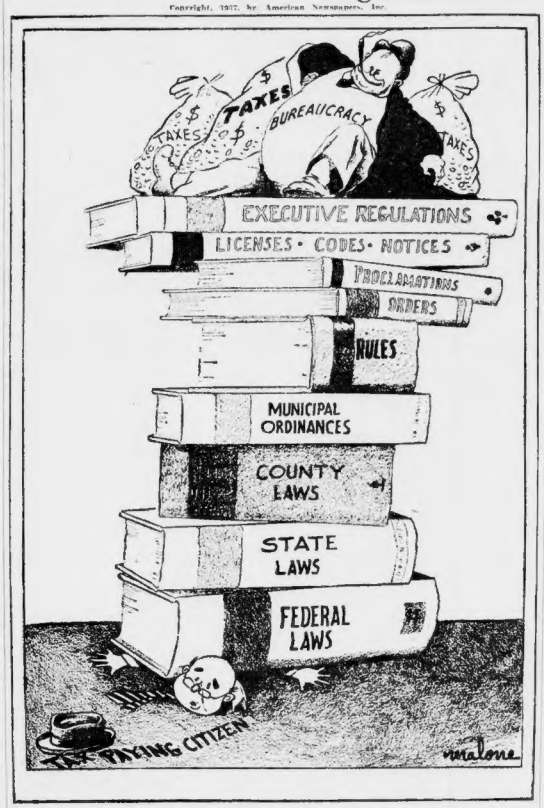
Speaking of eclipses, the writing world seems to discuss Henry L. Mencken almost completely in the past tense. As though his rapier had turned to rust and his days were spent on a Baltimore porch, rocking.

While this is all exaggeration, the truth is that the once fiery filibusterer has grown suddenly passive. Many say that the reelection of Roosevelt, whom he fought so utterly, soured Mencken on the whole business of public utterances.

Thingumbobs: W. W. Hawkins has joined the cigarette quitters. F. P. A. is free lancing . . . Jack Pearl is a student of medieval history . . . Purser Viller of the Normandie speaks nine languages fluently . . . Arthur Murray, but we digress, has made the largest of all fortunes out of the art of Terpsichore . . . E. B. White, who writes much of the whimsy for The New Yorker, has resigned to try life on a farm for a while.

The Ever Increasing Load



Bureaucracy, in this country, sits enthroned upon a vast and steadily increasing pile of GOVERNMENTAL COMMANDMENTS—Federal, State and local.

These commandments are called THE LAW and many of them are necessary.

But many laws have been enacted by politicians for the sole and obvious purpose of making more political jobs—that is, BUILDING MORE BUREAUCRACY.

And finally, there are the executive and departmental ORDERS, issued and enforced by bureaucrats with all the force and effect of statutory law.

With Congress, forty-eight Legislatures, hundreds of counties, and thousands of localities all grinding out more laws as years go by, what will be the end of it?

What will become of THE TAXPAYER, who NOW lies at the bottom of the heap beneath the mounting load of BUREAUCRACY?

That's That

-:- -:- By Bruce Gustin

Several hundred people witnessed the public execution of a murderer at Gallus, Mo. A hanging will draw a crowd in any community. The morbid attraction which such a spectacle has for so many people is no credit to our civilization, but it is a fact. Public executions are a disgrace to a civilized nation.

Alert prison guards at Columbus, O., foiled the attempt of a condemned murderer to take his own life. Three hours later, he was put to death in the electric chair. Prison officials probably would have been pleased to have him act as his own executioner, but the law had decreed a different kind of death for him. There are times when our laws seem an inexorable thing, and there are other times when they are full of loopholes one may drive a truck through them.

In the last 15 years, more than 416,000 men, women and children have been killed by automobiles in the United States. In that number of fatalities, you might think that all the possibilities of human carelessness and recklessness had been exhausted and that there could not be anything new now in the way of traffic "accidents."

But a motorist in California, at the cost of his life, has demonstrated a new kind of recklessness. He turned his car over while trying to run over a ground squirrel which darted across the road.

From Moscow comes word that the Soviet Government, in the greatest mass execution of spies in three years, shot to death 43 men and one woman. The victims had been convicted of espionage and sabotage plots. That is the way a dictatorship eliminates its political enemies. Anybody who differs with the boss is an enemy of the nation and as such is subject to "merciless extermination."

You may remember that Soviet Russia adopted a constitution recently guaranteeing its citizens freedom of speech and "inviolability of the person." But a constitution which doesn't operate isn't any good. The extermination of political opponents of the dictatorship goes on under the constitution the same as it did before.

There is talk in Europe of an arrangement for the withdrawal of "foreign volunteers" from the Spanish civil war. Great Britain and France are said to have agreed to do this if Germany, Russia, Italy and Portugal will join in the plan.

If the outsiders are taken from the Loyalist and Rebel armies in Spain, there won't be enough fighting men left to keep the war going much longer. This Spanish civil war seems to be "Spanish" principally in name.

One of the strongest economy pleas heard in Congress was voiced by Representative Lawrence Lewis of Denver when he warned that the nation is "drifting toward national insolvency and inflation" and declared:

"We are in a position comparable to that of one drifting in a boat down the river above Niagara Falls. Treasury receipts are hundreds of millions of dollars below the estimates. WE KNOW OUR INCOME WILL BE LESS THAN WE HAD EXPECTED AND OUR EXPENDITURES ARE GREATER THAN WE HAD PLANNED. And daily we are borrowing more money to run the government."

Lewis is a Roosevelt Democrat. He has been loyal to the administration all along. He is not trying to embarrass it now. He would save it from the folly of its own spenders.

W. Norman,
Gen'l Delivery,
Deep Nephew:

Just a line to let you know how things is on the Farm. I'm fine, Ma's fine, the pigs is fine, the red heifer has a right smart calf, but we lost Sport as all got out and ain't had no time to rite.

The reason is, we bin agetting ready for Hank Wallace's air attack. Maybe you see in the papers where the AAA has a new plan to spy on us Farmers with. They aim to fly airplanes all over the U. S. A. and take Aerial Photos of farms, to find out if we bin controling our crops like we promised.

Well Nephew, they ain't agoing to git nothing on your Uncle Enoch. When them AAA flying-machines come abuzzing over my 40-acre piece, I'll have the whole dang thing camouflaged.

I'm agoing to paint the top of my silo to look like a hot-dog stand, so's Hank Wallace won't suspect I bin growing wheat. The hired man says if we can find some old hats to put on the pigs, they will look like Summer Boarders from the city, and them Aerial Photos won't show how much illegal pork I got on the hoof.

Soon as we get Ma's vegetable patch fixed up to look like a tennis court, and them 5 acres of non-contract Potatoes camouflaged to look like rose bushes, we will be all ready.

Farm life is gitting too all fired complex these days, Nephew, what with the AAA coming at you thru the air like a Spanish Civil War, snapping candid cameras on you while you try to make a living. Only this morning Ma come arunning in and says, Git the shotgun, Enoch, they's a hawk flying around the chickern pen. I dassent shoot at it, Ma, I says, how do I know it ain't one of them AAA experts in his flying machine?

So tell the AAA to bring on their go-ding Aerial Survey, Nephew, but what this here nation really needs is less candid cameras and more candid congressmen.

UNCLE ENOCH.

Dirigible Disasters

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

The Department of Commerce is attempting to penetrate the mystery of the Hindenburg tragedy. Probably it will remain a mystery.

On six previous occasions in the dramatic history of these gigantic, lighter-than-air leviathans, the world has been shocked by great disasters in which scores of officers and men perished and many millions of dollars invested in the huge craft were thrown away.

Edwin C. Hill

Our own Shenandoah was caught in a 70-mile gale, near Caldwell, Ohio, on the night of Sept. 3, 1925, and the ship broke into three pieces. Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne and 13 of his crew were dashed to death; two were gravely injured, and 27 escaped.

The ship struck a line-squall, the variety of storm most feared by airmen, early in the morning as she was flying at a height of 3000 feet. The winds were beyond the strength of the ship. She broke into pieces like a child's toy balloon. The surviving officer was Lieutenant Commander Rosendahl, who later became the first commander of the Akron.

Among the other great dirigible disasters are the loss of the British ZR-2, the Italian-built Roma, the French Dixmude, the Italian ship Italia and the great British R-101. The loss of the British ZR-2 was especially shocking to America, because many American officers were aboard when it was destroyed over the Humber River in England in August, 1921.

A GREAT TRAGEDY

The ship had been taken from the German fleet at the close of the war. The ZR-2 was flying over Hull when it burst into flames, buckled, broke into pieces and plunged downward into the Humber river after two terrifying explosions. Four-four of the forty-nine persons aboard went to their deaths.

The next disaster was the destruction of the U. S. Army airship, the Roma, on February 21, 1922, in Virginia. Thirty-four men were killed and eight gravely injured when the ship plunged from a height of a thousand feet to the grounds of the Hamilton Roads naval base. She plunged directly into the high double wires of a high power electric line. The ship struck and rolled over, crashing as she fell.

A tremendous explosion took place and flames ran over the hull. The officers and men were so badly burned that they could not be identified.

The Dixmude, made in Germany and operated by the French navy, was lost under mysterious circumstances in 1923. She vanished while in flight over the Mediterranean and the cause of her destruction has never been established—one of the mysteries of the air. The body of her commander was found floating in the sea by a Sicilian fisherman, and her half-burned flag was also picked up from the waves.

It was once reported that tribesmen in the Sahara desert had seen the great ship flying out of control, but this was discounted as a mirage. The Dixmude must have caught fire in a great storm and gone down to her doom in the Mediterranean.

LOST AT POLE

The loss of the Italia on May 25, 1928, took place somewhere in the Arctic seas where she had been driven by General Umberto Nobile and the members of his North Pole expedition. The Italia crashed in the ice fields on its return from a flight to the Pole, and the lives of eight members of the expedition and of nine rescuers were lost in the disaster.

The Russian ice-breaker, Krassin, performed a heroic feat in smashing her way through the ice fields to reach the survivors, and Captain Einar Lundberg, a Swedish flier, landed his small plane on the ice and took off General Nobile. Several of his men carried away on the larger part of the ship were never found.

The loss of the British R-101 on October 5, 1930, when it struck a hill while passing over France, was the most terrifying of all the crashes. There were 53 persons aboard the ship and only five lived to tell the tale. Forty-six men were killed, probably instantaneously.

The R-101 was the biggest airship in existence on the day that she set out from her home port in Bedfordshire to fly to India. Five minutes after two in the morning, the catastrophe occurred at Allonne, near Beauvais, in France.

The night was wild. There were heavy rainstorms and terrific gusts of wind. Loaded down by the rain which beat upon her vast hull, the ship bore lower and lower until she rammed one of the low hills which surround the town of Allonne.

Nosing off from the hill she first rammed, she blundered along through the night and downpour, her nose dipping violently, and finally struck hard against another hill.

There was a terrific explosion. The whole ship burst into flames. The countryside was bright for many miles around from this terrible illumination of disaster and death. And then the flaming ship blew up with a vast report, a frightful roar which shook the stone houses of the French peasants far and near.

LIKE DOOMSDAY

When the first of the terrified people neared the spot where the R-101 had crashed in flames, the heat was so intense they could not approach within many yards. The bodies that were recovered revealed what a desperate effort the doomed men had made to escape. Clenched hands and limbs drawn back in agonized postures showed how they had fought to make their way out of the flaming wreckage.

And while the bonfire roared, consuming the fragments of the ship and its dead, the French peasants sank upon their knees, in the overwhelming and dreadful light of the leaping flames and prayed, a great circle of simply, terrified men and women.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Then suddenly you find that you can't write!

Elsie Robinson

Everything else is ready—typewriter, notes, ideas. And you're eager to get to the job. But you can't make it . . . the words won't click. Something in you has stopped . . . short-circuited!

What is it? You don't know. Nothing like this has ever happened to you before. For the moment you can only stare, surprised, dismayed . . . refusing to accept the situation.

The hours pass. The clutter overflows the wastebasket. You're trembling. A whole day gone and nothing done! Blankly you stare into the mocking twilight . . . your hands limp, your head falls forward with a sob.

EVERYONE SUFFERS

There's no use! You know it now! You're WRITTEN OUT! Oh, yes—perhaps you'll get another job. But as a writer, you're finished—THROUGH!

Desolation! Then presently—another day, another week—or possibly as it went, the power returns! A word sticks . . . a sentence makes sense . . . a paragraph flows, filled with the old fire! It's back! You've made contact . . . broken the jinx . . . you're writing again! Thank God—oh, thank God!

Every mortal, humble or great, who dares to dream and battle, toil and love. King on his throne, farmer at his plough, weary mother drudging for her babies . . . sooner or later this feeling of utter failure comes—

Even to a young God, dying on His cross . . . feeling that He'd somehow wasted His great chance. What was it He cried when God, Himself, seemed gone?

Eloi! Eloi! lama sabachthani! "My God! My God! Why hast thou forsaken me?"

But it isn't! You AREN'T finished. Life ISN'T through with you. This time of blank sterility is an natural part of busy, fruitful, triumphant hours.

FORGET FEAR

Life is like that. Always—beyond man's consciousness or control—Life's mysterious currents ebb and flow, come and go.

AND INEVITABLY, AT MIDTIDE, COMES SOME HOUR WHEN THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE SPIRIT LIE EMPTY AND BARE!

Don't fear! Watch Life instead! Mark how it has its set and certain seasons for all things.

Times when one's power floods like singing surf . . . times when it ebbs to silent emptiness. Yet each time has its potent place in growth!

So when your own black hour comes, be not afraid. Say to yourself—"The tide is out. Tomorrow—or tomorrow—it will flood again. But for the present, I must watch and wait. I must be still . . . go through the motions . . . and have faith in God. For He Who made me will not fail me now!"
